

THE WALL STREET JOURNAL.

What's News

Business & Finance

- ◆ Nvidia chips for laptop computers are set to hit the market this year in products from Dell, Lenovo and others, a return to the consumer PC market for the leader in artificial-intelligence chips. B1
- ◆ Investor Ed Garden has built a stake in building-products supplier Fortune Brands, the maker of Moen faucets and Master Lock padlocks, and is seeking to replace the incoming chief executive along with other changes. B1
- ◆ U.S. investors are flocking to the so-called HALO trade, buying shares of companies that appear to have strong odds of surviving the artificial-intelligence revolution. B1
- ◆ Trump demanded that Netflix drop former national security adviser Susan Rice from its board, adding another political headache to the company's pursuit of Warner Bros. Discovery's key entertainment assets. B3
- ◆ Streaming appears to have thrown a lifeline to cable television, as cable providers make streaming apps part of their subscription packages as an inducement to consumers to stay. B1
- ◆ Latham & Watkins poached two partners to join its practice from Wachter Lipton, the elite law firm in Manhattan, in the latest talent maneuvering in the M&A legal industry. B3
- ◆ Boutique investment bank Centerview Partners agreed to settle a lawsuit with a former analyst shortly before trial, resolving a case that was set to examine the responsibilities of one of the most grueling jobs in finance. B9

Worldwide

- ◆ Trump said he would increase to 15% a global tariff that will replace many of the duties ruled illegal by the Supreme Court on Friday. A1, A2, B1, B3
- ◆ Mexico's military killed the country's most powerful drug kingpin, Nemesio "Mencho" Osaguera, escalating the government's war against cartels. A7
- ◆ A man who police said was armed with a shotgun and in possession of a gasoline canister was shot and killed after breaching the secure perimeter at Trump's Mar-a-Lago home. A3
- ◆ Students at universities across Tehran clashed with pro-Iranian regime demonstrators as anger over a brutal government crackdown spilled onto campuses for a second straight day. A8
- ◆ A South Carolina judge denied a claim of self-defense for one of two men who had avoided arrest by saying they feared for their lives when they fatally shot a third man during a road-rage encounter. A3
- ◆ Two federal agencies contradicted each other about whether the TSA PreCheck program for airport travelers would remain open during the DHS shutdown. A3
- ◆ Trump said he plans to send a hospital ship to Greenland as part of his continuing effort to exercise control of the island in the Arctic. A7
- ◆ GOP Rep. Maria Elvira Salazar warned Trump that his administration's hard-line deportation policies are putting the Republican Party's House majority at risk in the midterm elections. A4

CONTENTS		Markets.....	B9
Arts in Review....	A12	Opinion.....	A13-15
Business & Finance	B2-5	Personal Journal	A10-11
Capital Account....	A2	Sports.....	A16
Crossword.....	A11	The Ticker.....	B4
Heard on Street....	B10	U.S. News.....	A2-6
Market Data.....	B7	World News.....	A7-8

Overtime Goal Lifts U.S. to Olympic Hockey Gold

THEY'RE NO. 1: Jack Hughes of the men's hockey squad gave his all—including two teeth—as his goal beat Canada, 2-1. The win on the last day of the Milan Cortina Winter Games delivered the U.S. its first Olympic championship since 1980. A16

How the Epstein Files Release Frustrated Trump White House

Reams of new data came to light, forcing DOJ to scramble to complete redactions

By JOSH DAWSEY AND SADIE GURMAN

When the Justice Department released its last trove of millions of files about Jeffrey Epstein, President Trump found himself in the same place he had spent a year trying to avoid—dealing with the fallout, again.

The files showed his own commerce secretary, Howard Lutnick, had visited with Epstein long after Lutnick said they had cut ties.

Lutnick had to publicly explain his past statements, provoking a direct conversation with Trump, administration officials familiar with the matter said. Trump questioned why he previously denied connections to Epstein when he knew he had visited Epstein's island, the officials said.

Since last February, the administration has tried to move on from questions about an issue that has animated Trump supporters like few others, even as it has continued to metastasize.

Trump officials initially opposed the release of the files from the investigation into the convicted sex offender and then fumbled their response, telling allies there was little new information to glean from the documents.

The disclosures from the latest release, ordered by Congress, have instead forced prominent lawyers and busi-

Please turn to page A6

◆ Epstein ties haunt Hollywood power broker... B5

Smaller Businesses Are Giving Bigger Nod To 401(k)s

By ANNE TERGESEN

Small businesses from farms to sports clubs are now offering 401(k)s to their employees, filling what has long been a hole in the U.S.'s retirement-savings system.

The number of workers at small businesses with access to 401(k)-style plans has grown by nearly six million since 2019, according to a report published on Saturday by Gusto, a payroll and benefits provider.

Among them is Sherrell Martin, CEO of Nitram Financial Solutions, who started a 401(k) plan a few years ago for her then-six-person firm, which handles accounting and bookkeeping services for professional-service companies and faith-based schools.

Martin said she added the 401(k) to help her National Harbor, Md., company attract and retain workers. She also wanted to save for her own retirement, something she had put on hold after launching the firm in 2012.

"As an accountant, I understand the importance of investing and saving for the future, but I wasn't doing it,"

Please turn to page A6

Snow Threat Brings Delays

GROUNDING: A ground crew deiced a plane at LaGuardia Airport in New York on Sunday, as a fast-developing storm threatened to pummel the East Coast with a blizzard. A3

In Race for Deals, Boys Repeat a Grade

More redo eighth grade in bid to juice their college sports earning potential

By HARRIET RYAN

Michael Cancelleri, an entrepreneur in San Clemente, Calif., has poured tens of thousands of dollars into his son's baseball career—club team fees, tournament travel and top-of-the-line equipment.

As high school approached, Cancelleri decided that wasn't enough. He paid about $20,000 for his son, a straight-A student, to repeat a grade at a private middle school sports academy.

"The draw to it [was] just giving him a little bit of extra time to develop and mature," said Cancelleri, whose 15-year-old son, Carter, has grown about 3 inches since August and hopes to be a strong competitor next year as a high school freshman.

Sixty other boys are repeating a grade at the same academy, The Togethershhip, where coursework includes throwing mechanics, game film review and nutrition

Please turn to page A9

Axe Tells Teens: Tone Down the Body Spray

The brand is rolling out a new bottle with a more controlled sprayer, taking aim at the decades-long practice of the full drenching

By MEGAN GRAHAM

Axe body spray is well aware of its reputation.

Teenage boys have been drenching themselves and their surroundings in its scents for decades—and drawing complaints and choking coughs for just as long.

Now, even Axe is encouraging them to tone it down.

The Unilever-owned brand, which makes deodorants, body sprays, styling and other products for young men, is rolling out new bottles with more control. A new spray mechanism delivers a "lighter, more controlled application," it says. To promote the change, Axe is running a campaign called "The History of Overdoing It."

"Women don't want to see your fish," a man reads in one ad, referring to the trope of

Please turn to page A9

Trump Boosts Global Tariff To 15%

The rate is up from 10% level president announced after high-court setback

By GAVIN BADE AND NATALIE ANDREWS

WASHINGTON—President Trump said he would increase to 15% a global tariff that will replace many of the duties ruled illegal by the Supreme Court.

In a social-media post on Saturday, the president said the new level, up from 10%, would take effect immediately. He said his decision to increase the tariff rate was the result of a "thorough, detailed, and complete review of the ridiculous, poorly written, and extraordinarily anti-American" Supreme Court ruling.

On Friday, the Supreme Court overturned most of Trump's second-term tariffs, rejecting the administration's argument that a 1977 law, the International Emergency Economic Powers Act, or IEEPA, implicitly authorized the tariffs. Later that day, Trump denounced the ruling and immediately reinstated a 10% global

Please turn to page A2

- ◆ Greg Ip: Global trade will never be the same..... A2
- ◆ Trump's court harmony hits a sour note..... A2
- ◆ CEOs try to make sense of tariff ruling..... B1
- ◆ Heard on the Street: Commodities affected.. B10

Russia, China Offer Ally Iran Little Help

By DAVID S. CLOUD

Iran has sought for years to build closer military ties with China and Russia, but its powerful friends are proving reluctant to step forward as the regime faces the most acute U.S. threat to its survival in decades.

Russia and Iran conducted small-scale joint naval training in the Gulf of Oman this past week, a show of force dwarfed by the U.S. firepower assembled in the region at sea and on land. An exercise involving ships from China, as well as Russia and Iran, is planned to take place soon in the Strait of Hormuz, Iranian state media reported.

Iran has also sought to rebuild its missile stockpile, air defenses and other capabilities with help from China and Russia, some analysts said, after those elements of its military power were battered in a 12-day war against Israel and the U.S. in June. But Beijing and Moscow have shown little willingness to provide direct military assistance if President Trump does order an attack on Iran, some analysts said.

"They're not going to sacrifice their own interests for the Iranian regime," said Danny Citrinowicz, a former Israeli military-intelligence official and now a senior researcher at the Tel Aviv-based Institute for National Security Studies. "They are hoping the regime

Please turn to page A8

- ◆ Students, regime loyalists square off in Iran..... A8

ORACLE

NetSuite

Run smarter. Grow faster.

The #1 AI Cloud ERP

Turn unified data into intelligent action

Over 43,000 businesses rely on NetSuite as their single source of truth, connecting real-time data across ERP/Financials, CRM, ecommerce, and more.

This is the business suite that's built for scale. Built for AI. Built for what's next.

SCAN ME