

Chicago Tribune

$4.00 | TUESDAY, JUNE 2, 2026 | CHICAGOTRIBUNE.COM

US bombs radar and drone sites in Iran

Trump says Israel, Hezbollah agree to dial back fighting

By Jon Gambrell
ASSOCIATED PRESS

DUBAI, United Arab Emirates — The United States said Monday that it bombed radar and drone sites in Iran after Tehran shot down an American drone over the weekend. Iran then said it targeted American soldiers in Kuwait with missiles, which the U.S. says it shot down.

The nominal ceasefire between Iran and the U.S. has been repeatedly tested with back-and-forth attacks, though officials from both countries are still trying to negotiate an end to the war. It's not clear how close they are to a deal — and there is always the risk that an attack could derail those talks.

Fighting has also been escalating between Israel and the Lebanese militant group Hezbollah, despite their nominal ceasefire declared in mid-April, and that has increasingly threatened the emerging deal to extend the Iran war ceasefire.

On Monday afternoon President Donald Trump said Israel and Hezbollah had agreed to dial back their fighting after he held talks with Israeli Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu and communicated with Hezbollah through mediators.

Moments later, though, Israel said it had detected missile launches from Lebanon and warned Israelis in part of northern Israel to take cover in protected spaces.

In a social media post, Trump said there would be no Israeli troops “going to Beirut, and any Troops that are on their way, have already been turned back.”

The president said Hezbollah had “agreed that all shooting will stop — That Israel will not attack them, and they will not attack Israel.”

Netanyahu confirmed the conversation but cast it less as restraint and more as a warning, saying he told Trump that Israel would strike targets in Beirut if Hezbollah's attacks do not stop. The Israeli military will continue “to operate as planned” in southern Lebanon, Netanyahu added.

Lebanese authorities secured Hezbollah's approval of a proposal by Secretary of State Marco Rubio that Israel would not strike Beirut's southern suburbs, and Hezbollah would not attack northern Israel, according to a statement issued by the Lebanese Embassy to the U.S.

Trump spoke with Ambassador Nada Hamadeh Mouawad and

See IRAN on Page A8

Pritzker touts wins in $56B state budget

But some work in election-year plan went unfinished

By Dan Petrella and Jack O'Connor
CHICAGO TRIBUNE

SPRINGFIELD — Speaking in his ceremonial office at the Illinois State Capitol hours after lawmakers voted early Monday morning to approve a nearly $56 billion election-year state spending plan, Gov. JB Pritzker made his case that eight years of his financial stewardship have put a once-struggling state on sounder footing.

Pointing to improved credit ratings, reduced pension liabilities and a replenished, albeit still comparatively small, rainy-day fund, Pritzker previewed the themes likely to define his bid for a rare third term as governor in November.

“From start to finish, the work of the legislative session we just completed was informed by the priorities and values of Illinois families, like lowering costs, investing in and protecting our children, laying the foundation for long-term economic development and job creation, and improving our state's overall fiscal health,” Pritzker said.

See BUDGET on Page A4

“From start to finish, the work of the legislative session we just completed was informed by the priorities and values of Illinois families, like lowering costs, investing in and protecting our children, laying the foundation for long-term economic development and job creation, and improving our state's overall fiscal health.”

— JB PRITZKER, Illinois governor

INSIDE

■ Illinois will not broadly allow multiunit housing on single-family residential lots, at least for now, after a package of housing ideas championed by Pritzker failed to pass. Chicagoland, Page 3

■ Chicago Mayor Brandon Johnson welcomed a new proposal as an opening to reconsider Chicago as the site for a new Bears stadium. Chicagoland, Page 3

Above: Gov. JB Pritzker takes questions after the end of the spring legislative session at the Illinois State Capitol in Springfield on Monday.

JOHN J. KIM/CHICAGO TRIBUNE

Bears' stadium deal collapse has echoes of 1988 Sox drama

By Rick Pearson and Jeremy Gerner
CHICAGO TRIBUNE

SPRINGFIELD — As the midnight adjournment deadline approached on the final night of Illinois' 1988 spring legislative session, a sense of pressure gripped the statehouse.

Gov. James R. Thompson and House Speaker Michael Madigan roamed the rows of the House chamber, offering trades — pet projects, promises of political support — in exchange for votes on a taxpayer-funded stadium to keep the Chicago White Sox from bolting to St. Petersburg, Florida.

When the clock hit midnight, an out-of-state TV reporter loudly declared, “That's it. That's it. The White Sox are going to Florida.” He didn't know Illinois politics. The roll call stayed open until the 60th and final vote was secured at 12:03 a.m. — three minutes past the deadline, when it should have required 71 votes to pass. The bill was declared passed anyway, with the official roll call time recorded as 11:59 p.m.

Thirty-eight years later, the final

See BEARS on Page A2

New wave of enforcement leaves street vendors fearful

Workers, advocates say arrests and confiscations have recently intensified

By Laura Rodríguez Presa
CHICAGO TRIBUNE

Hoping to earn enough money to cover her son's daycare, Maria Cuetia made her way downtown on Mother's Day to sell mangos near Randolph Street and Michigan Avenue. Walking beside her cart was her 3-year-old son, proudly pushing his own toy cart through the crowded streets.

The boy had been sick for a few days, forcing Cuetia to stay home to care for him and lose valuable income. Holidays, she said, are often one of the few opportunities street vendors have to earn enough to get ahead, so she had decided to head downtown to sell fruit.

But moments after setting up her cart, a group of Chicago police officers approached her. Though other vendors nearby ran, she didn't, worried that it would frighten her son. She calmly pleaded with officers, telling them she would leave the area. She begged them not to arrest her and not to take the cart she depended on to survive.

“I asked for a Spanish speaker and explained my situation. Initially they only gave me a court date and let me go, but as I began walking away, another group of officers approached me and took my cart away,” she told the Tribune in Spanish.

Cuetia, who came to Chicago seeking asylum from Colombia, returned home that day with less than she started with: no cart, no money and little hope.

“My crime was trying to provide for my child,” she said. “I don't understand why they (police) were so heartless. I was already walking away.”

Like Cuetia, street vendors across Chicago say they are facing a new and aggressive wave of enforcement from Chicago police. In recent weeks, dozens of vendors have been arrested, ticketed, cited or had their merchandise confiscated, particularly along Michigan Avenue and outside major events across the city, according to the Street Vendors Association of Chicago.

Recently, a viral video showed a couple in handcuffs escorted by a

See VENDORS on Page A4

Pedestrians walk past a vendor's cart topped with cups of fruit to sell along Michigan Avenue near the Art Institute of Chicago on Wednesday. ANTONIO PEREZ/CHICAGO TRIBUNE

Transit funding law now in effect

Landmark legislation intended to prevent service cuts on the CTA, Metra and Pace went into effect Monday. It is expected to raise about $1.5 billion annually. Business

Hegseth alters Navy promotion list

In a move that disproportionately targets women and minority officers, the U.S. defense secretary blocked the promotions of at least seven officers. Nation & World

Bregman works on power stroke

Cubs third baseman has been working with coaches to tap into more power after breaking a stretch of 83 plate appearances without one on Sunday. Chicago Sports

SUBSCRIPTION

Visit myaccount.chicagotribune.com or call 312-546-7900 to sign up for a subscription. To place an ad, visit placeanad.chicagotribune.com.

WEATHER FORECAST

TODAY H:74 L: 51 WED. H:82 L: 60 THU. H:86 L: 69
Complete details on Page A16

INDEX

Almanac A8
Arts & Living B7
Comics B10-11
Crossword B11
Editorials A5
Horoscope B10
Nation & World B4
Obituaries A8
Television B9

178th year No. 153
© Chicago Tribune

