

Chicago Tribune

QUESTIONS? CALL 1-800-TRIBUNE

FRIDAY, FEBRUARY 7, 2025

BREAKING NEWS AT CHICAGOTRIBUNE.COM

Feds sue over sanctuary status

Citizenship change blocked: Another federal judge has issued a nationwide preliminary injunction to block President Donald Trump’s effort to end automatic citizenship for babies born on U.S. soil to immigrants in the country without legal permission. Nation & World

Trump administration takes aim at city, county, state protections for immigrants

By Jeremy Gorner, Alice Yin and A.D. Quig
Chicago Tribune

SPRINGFIELD — President Donald Trump’s administration went to court Thursday to challenge sanctuary policies in the state of Illinois, Cook County and the city of Chicago that limit the powers of state and local police to assist federal law enforcement on immigration-related matters. Those policies “have the purpose and effect of making it more difficult for, and deliberately impeding, federal immigration officers’ ability to carry out their responsibilities in those jurisdictions,” the plaintiffs argue in their lawsuit, filed in federal court in Chicago. The lawsuit argues that the U.S. Constitution’s Supremacy Clause “prohibits Illinois, Chicago, Cook County, and their officials from obstructing the Federal Government’s ability to enforce laws that Congress has enacted or to take actions entrusted to it by the Constitution.” Since taking office last month, Trump has vowed to go after Democrat-led cities and states that have implemented sanctuary policies, even though the courts have generally determined such policies to be constitutional. The legal challenge represents the latest salvo in the Trump administration’s crackdown on immigration that has Chicago in its crosshairs. The lawsuit could complicate the decision by Chicago Mayor Brandon Johnson, a defendant in the lawsuit, to testify before Congress next month in a Republican-led hearing on sanctuary cities. Johnson said the city received the lawsuit Thursday and will respond, but

Turn to Lawsuit, Page 4

VIRGINIA MCCASKEY 1923-2025

‘A LEGACY OF CLASS’

George Halas’ daughter, owner of Bears, guided team with passion, patience and touch of father’s toughness

Above, George Halas with his daughter, Virginia McCaskey, at a game against the Packers on Aug. 19, 1968, in Milwaukee. McCaskey, who inherited the team from her father and guided it for four decades, died Thursday at the age of 102. ED FEENEY/CHICAGO TRIBUNE

By Don Pierson | Chicago Tribune

Virginia McCaskey, principal owner of the Chicago Bears and the only daughter of team founder George Halas, died Thursday, the team announced. She was 102. “While we are sad, we are comforted knowing Virginia Halas McCaskey lived a long, full, faith-filled life and is now with the love of her life on earth,” the family said in a statement. “She guided the Bears for four decades and based every business decision on what was best for Bears players, coaches, staff and fans.” McCaskey was reluctantly forced by circumstance to take over her father’s enterprise. She guarded it with passion, patience and more than a touch of Papa Bear’s legendary toughness and

Turn to McCaskey, Page 5

Agents visible in Hamline footage

Mystery persists on Secret Service visit, misunderstanding

By Caroline Kubzansky and Nell Salzman
Chicago Tribune

Chicago Public Schools officials had a calm, seemingly friendly conversation with two Secret Service agents outside Hamline Elementary School hours before the district sparked a nationwide panic when it falsely proclaimed Immigration and Customs Enforcement agents had tried to enter the building, according to recently released security footage. The roughly seven-minute conversation raises questions about how the misunderstanding occurred and why incorrect information was shared with an already frightened community. Neither CPS nor the Secret Service would comment on the video, which was obtained under the Freedom of Information Act. Jadine Chou, CPS safety and security chief, is leaving the district this week, though district officials said it was a planned departure and unrelated to the ICE snafu. The footage from Jan. 24, released in two, 30-minute recordings that offered different angles of the conversation, begins with two agents walking up to the main entrance and buzzing the intercom. They then fidget and peer through a window as they wait to be allowed entry. At one point,

Turn to Hamline, Page 5

Just hours before deadline, judge halts federal worker buyout plan

By Chris Megerian, Collin Binkley and Byron Tau
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — A federal judge Thursday temporarily blocked President Donald Trump’s plan to push out federal workers by offering them financial incentives, the latest twist in a chaotic and distressing saga playing out for millions of government employees. The ruling came hours before the midnight deadline for them to apply for the deferred resignation program. U.S. District Judge George O’Toole in Boston directed the administration to extend that deadline until after a court hearing he scheduled for Monday afternoon. O’Toole did not express an opinion on the legality of the program, which is being challenged by several labor unions, and said he would weigh arguments next week. At the White House, press secretary Karoline Levitt said more than 40,000 federal workers have applied to leave in return for being paid until Sept. 30. “We encourage federal workers in this city to accept the very generous offer,” she said at about the same time as the judge’s ruling came out. “They don’t want to come into the office. If they want to rip the American people off, then they’re welcome to take this buyout and we’ll find highly qualified people” to replace them. The deferred resignation program was orchestrated by Elon Musk, the billionaire entrepreneur who is serving as a top adviser to Trump. It is part of the Republican president’s

Turn to Buyouts, Page 4

■ Trump, Musk move to oust EPA staff in the region, including dozens responsible for protecting drinking water for 30 million in U.S. and Canada. Chicagoland, Page 2

INSIDE

EILEEN T. MESLAR/CHICAGO TRIBUNE

At annual auto show, a chance to vet the ‘Vette

People check out a Chevrolet Corvette ZR1 cutaway during media preview day at the Chicago Auto Show on Thursday at McCormick Place. The atmosphere is electric at this year’s show, with two indoor EV test tracks, dozens of models and several high-profile debuts, including the first appearance by homegrown Rivian. Coverage in Business

