STREETING BACKS PROSTATE TESTS

Health Secretary hails Mail's campaign for national screening

Daily Mail CAMPAIGN
END NEEDLESS PROSTATE DEATHS

WES Streeting yesterday declared his support for a national prostate cancer screening programme.

In a major boost for the Mail's campaign, the Health Secretary told MPs he would like to see the NHS proactively offer men tests for the disease in a move that could prevent thousands of needless deaths.

He said he is 'particularly sympathetic' to the argument that this should initially target high-risk groups, including black men or those who have a family history of prostate cancer.

Analysis by Prostate Cancer Research suggests this would lead to an extra 775 cases being diagnosed early each year among men aged 45 to
