

THE WALL STREET JOURNAL.

DOW JONES | News Corp

*****

THURSDAY, JUNE 4, 2026 ~ VOL. CCLXXXVII NO. 129

WSJ.com

★★★★ $5.00

DJIA 50687.07 ▼ 620.72 1.21% NASDAQ 26853.98 ▼ 0.9% STOXX 600 621.19 ▼ 0.7% 10-YR. TREAS. ▼ 9/32, yield 4.491% OIL $96.02 ▲ $2.26 GOLD $4,436.70 ▼ $52.40 EURO $1.1598 YEN 160.09

What's News

Business & Finance

- ◆ The capital earmarked for data centers continues to grow, but supply-chain backlogs, permitting fights and power availability are setting back schedules for their construction. A1
- ◆ Bitcoin declined for a fourth straight session to around $65,380. U.S. indexes slid, with the S&P 500, Dow and Nasdaq falling 0.7%, 1.2% and 0.9%, respectively. B1
- ◆ U.S. crude-oil inventories extended their decline to six weeks as exports rose and refineries ran near full capacity, EIA data showed. B11
- ◆ SpaceX bucked tradition when it set a price for its shares more than a week before its planned listing rather than setting a range and refining it after days of meetings with investors. B1
- ◆ Macy's net sales increased 1.8% to $4.68 billion in the three months ended May 2, while profit climbed to $63 million from $38 million a year earlier. B1
- ◆ Volvo said its global sales fell 5.5% year-to-year to 178,980 vehicles in the three months ended May and added that sales in China remained under pressure. B4
- ◆ AkzoNobel shares fell after Sherwin-Williams and Nippon Paint said they were dropping their effort to buy the Dutch paint manufacturer. B3
- ◆ U.K. regulators said they would allow publishers to opt out of feeding their content to power AI features in Google's online searches. B5
- ◆ AlphaSense raised $350 million from backers including Accenture, an inflow that nearly doubled the AI-market-research platform's valuation. B3

Worldwide

- ◆ The Republican-led House voted 215-208 to restrict Trump's ability to continue the war against Iran without congressional approval. A1
- ◆ The president told aides that he would consider ending the ceasefire with Iran if Tehran kills American troops, insisting that the pause in airstrikes remains intact. A8
- ◆ Senate Republicans headed toward a floor showdown over the Trump administration's $1.8 billion "anti-weaponization" fund, as some lawmakers sought guarantees in law that the money pot was truly dead. A3
- ◆ A relatively unknown businessman and farmer, Zach Lahn, upset Trump-backed congressman Randy Feenstra in Iowa's Republican primary for governor. A4
- ◆ Top artificial-intelligence executives joined security experts in calling on Congress to protect against biological threats posed by the technology. A2
- ◆ The U.S. proposed new tariffs of at least 10% on many of its trading partners over an alleged failure to address forced-labor concerns and was rebuffed by some of those concerned. A2
- ◆ Regulators are probing whether former Rep. George Santos traded illegally in a predictions contract that referred to his own appearance at this year's State of the Union address. A3
- ◆ Ebola reached a corner of the Democratic Republic of Congo controlled by Islamic State militants, making it too dangerous for health workers to operate there. A9

|                            |                         |
|----------------------------|-------------------------|
| CONTENTS            | Markets Digest..... B7  |
| Arts in Review..... A12    | Opinion..... A13-15     |
| Business & Finance B2-3510 | Personal Journal A10-11 |
| Crossword..... A11         | Sports..... A16         |
| From Page One..... A9      | Technology..... B4      |
| Heard on Street..... B12   | U.S. News..... A2-4     |
| Markets..... B11           | World News..... A6,8-9  |

© 2026 Dow Jones & Company, Inc.
All Rights Reserved

House Rebuffs Trump on War

Measure to restrict powers in Iran conflict passes with support from some in GOP

WASHINGTON—The GOP-led House voted to restrict President Trump's ability to continue the war against Iran without congressional approval, a rebuke to the White House and the latest sign that Republican lawmakers' support for the war is eroding on Capitol Hill.

The measure passed 215-208, with four Republicans joining Democrats in support. The resolution, which is unlikely to become law, directs the president to remove U.S. armed forces from hostilities against Iran unless explicitly authorized by Congress, other than to defend the U.S., an ally or partner from "imminent attack."

The war, which began in late February, has shifted from a heavy bombing campaign to a fragile ceasefire as the U.S. and Iran jockey for control of the Strait of Hormuz. Negotiators remain far apart on the future of Tehran's nuclear program, and skirmishes have ticked up in recent days as the U.S. enforces its blockade of Iran and its ports.

When Trump launched the war, fellow Republicans backed him, saying the president had the authority to act as commander in chief. But as the war dragged on with no

Please turn to page A8

◆ Trump makes U.S. troop deaths Iran red line..... A8

Smoke billowed after Ukrainian drones hit infrastructure in St Petersburg, Russia, on Wednesday, local authorities said. A6

Putin Bucks Elites' Call to End Conflict

By YAROSLAV TROFIMOV

Russia's inability to break through the stalemate in Ukraine is becoming so evident that significant voices in the Russian establishment have publicly started to call for an end to the conflict.

The big question is whether President Vladimir Putin will acknowledge this reality and abandon his aspiration to extinguish Ukrainian independence.

So far, there is no sign that, in the fifth year of Europe's bloodiest conflict in generations, he is ready to climb down from the original objectives of his "special military operation." But that could change if the tide of war turns further in Kyiv's favor.

The calls don't just come from the business elites and more liberal parts of the Russian establishment. Some of Russia's best-known hawks have also become much more open in expressing a belief that Moscow simply doesn't have the capacity to achieve an outright victory against Ukraine.

One of those is Oleg Tsaryov, a former Ukrainian lawmaker who fled to Russia in 2014 and who was one of Putin's top candidates for heading a pro-Russian puppet regime that the Kremlin planned to install in an occupied Kyiv in early 2022. He was severely injured in an assassination attempt attributed to Ukrainian intelligence the following year.

In a Telegram post in May, Tsaryov warned that Russian propaganda had fostered a dangerous illusion about an inevitable victory against Ukraine.

"The professionals in creating an alternative reality have convinced not just the population, but also themselves, that the illusion that

Please turn to page A6

'60 Minutes' Meltdown Caps Weeks Of Rancor At CBS News

By ISABELLA SIMONETTI

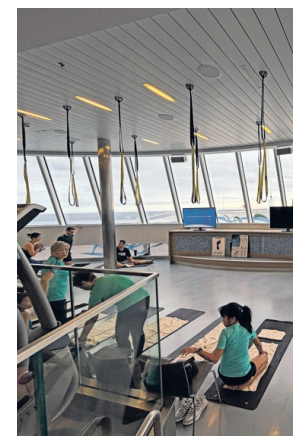

Emotions were running high again at CBS News. Longtime "60 Minutes" correspondent Scott Pelley had delivered a rebuke of CBS News Editor in Chief Bari Weiss at a staff meeting Monday, accusing her of "murdering" the storied news show. He also criticized her choice of Nick Bilton as a new executive producer.

After his remarks, Weiss and other senior leaders debated how to proceed, people familiar with the matter said. The executives believed Pelley's behavior was insubordinate and a fireable offense, but they decided to speak with him to discuss his future at the network.

David Ellison, CEO of CBS's parent, Paramount, spoke with Weiss about how she would approach that conversation, people familiar with the situation said.

The circumstances of Pelley's departure illustrate a broader moment of crisis within CBS News and its signature show. "60 Minutes" correspondents who departed recently have accused the network of making editorial decisions for political purposes as Paramount works to close its deal for media company Warner Bros. Discovery.

A CBS spokesman said there is "no political interference." Please turn to page A4

PERSONAL JOURNAL
Surviving 12 hours of corny cruise activities during a full day at sea. A11

INSIDE

BUSINESS & FINANCE
Sticker shock at the pump fuels a surge in sales of hybrid cars and trucks. B1

The World Is Going Crazy Over Fireflies

* * *

Lottery spots and campsites are hard to come by; downpours and mosquitoes aren't

By JACOB PASSY

The Photinus carolinus species of firefly has just a few weeks every summer to flash their bioluminescent lights and mate.

The beetles may have gotten too good at their job. These days, their rare display is also attracting tourists by the thousands, who queue up for limited tours and compete for ideal photo spots to capture nature at its most magical.

Bugging out

A little rain wasn't going to stop Kealey Linton and her 4-year-old daughter. The pair set off to Great Smoky Mountains National Park from their home in North Carolina over Memorial Day weekend.

Despite the forecast, their expectations for illumination were high. America's most-visited national park is home to 19 firefly species. Photinus carolinus, also known as the Smokies syn-

Please turn to page A11

President Joins Regulatory Fray

Trump gets in weeds on issues usually handled by agencies

The debate over how to respond to Omnicom Group's $13 billion acquisition of Interpublic Group to create the

By Josh Dawsey,
Dana Mattioli,
Rebecca Ballhaus
and Jessica Toonkel

world's largest ad business came down to two people: Federal Trade Commission chairman Andrew Ferguson—and President Trump.

Sitting in the Oval Office with Ferguson last August to discuss the deal, once considered a run-of-the-mill review left to FTC staff, Trump invited an interested party to weigh in. He dialed his friend Newsmax CEO Chris Ruddy, who had been lobbying the president to block it, on speaker phone, according to people familiar with the call.

The head of the conservative news channel had

Please turn to page A9

Knicks' Dolan Enjoys A Reversal of Fortune

By ROBERT O'CONNELL
AND KATHERINE SAYRE

For decades, the only thing that seemed less likely than the New York Knicks' reaching the NBA Finals was the idea that James Dolan might be the one to lead them there.

Dolan, the combative billionaire owner who has overseen the team since 1999, had failed repeatedly and spectacularly to construct a champion. Instead of collecting trophies, he sued a rival franchise, feuded with fans and—despite his success elsewhere in the entertainment world—relentlessly attacked the NBA itself.

Yet Dolan, 71 years old, now finds himself suddenly sitting on not one, but two massive triumphs.

The concert venue he sketched out a decade ago—Sphere in Las Vegas—has become the world's highest-grossing arena. And on Wednesday night, basketball hell froze over: Dolan's Knicks played their first NBA Finals game in 27 years. They won on the road against the San Antonio Spurs, 105-95, to take a 1-0 lead in the series.

"He challenges me. He challenges the players," Knicks coach Mike Brown said of Dolan. "You want that from your boss."

Before he climbed to the

Please turn to page A16