UAE says Israel's West Bank plans are a 'red line'

ANNEXATION MOVES AIMED AT 'BURYING THE IDEA OF A PALESTINIAN STATE'

The UAE yesterday warned Israel that annexation in the occupied West Bank would constitute a "red line" that would severely undermine the Abraham Accords, which normalised UAE-Israeli relations.

Lana Nusseibeh, Assistant Minister for Political Affairs at the Foreign Ministry and Envoy of the Minister of Foreign Affairs, told Reuters the Accords were designed to support Palestinians and their "legitimate aspiration for an independent state."

She urged Israel to suspend settlement plans, saying: "Extremists of any kind cannot be allowed to dictate the region's trajectory. Peace requires courage, persistence and a refusal to let violence define our choices."

Accords under threat

Nusseibeh warned that annexation would "severely undermine the vision and spirit" of the Accords and "end the pursuit of regional integration."

She added that Israeli proposals to annex parts of the West Bank were aimed at "burying the idea of a Palestinian state."

with the Arab consensus that ties should wait until Palestinian statehood was secured.

The accords were seen as a diplomatic triumph for Trump, who, in his second term, hopes to persuade Saudi Arabia to also normalise ties with Israel and further ease its regional isolation.

Also yesterday, Israel's far-right Finance Minister Bezalel Smotrich presented a plan to annex large areas of the West Bank, urging Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu to "make a historic decision to apply Israeli sovereignty to all open areas in Judea and Samaria."

Smotrich called for Israeli annexation of "all open areas" of the territory.

The warning from Abu Dhabi came as Belgium became the latest country to announce it would recognise Palestine at the United Nations, further intensifying pressure on Israel.

Dubai world's top hub for executive nomads

Abu Dhabi in second place affirms UAE's dominance

DUBAI

BY ASHFAQ AHMED
Managing Editor

Dubai has once again been named the world's best destination for executive nomads, taking the top spot in the Savills Executive Nomad Index 2025 for the third consecutive year.

Abu Dhabi followed closely in second place, reaffirming the UAE's dominance in attracting globally mobile professionals.

The index, which assessed 30 global destinations, measured factors such as internet speed, air connectivity, housing markets, climate stability, and overall quality of life.

Dubai scored highest thanks to its unrivalled connectivity, advanced infrastructure, family-friendly amenities, and lifestyle advantages that continue to attract high-level business leaders, entrepreneurs, and remote-working executives.

Who are executive nomads?

Unlike digital nomads, who are typically younger freelancers, executive nomads are often business founders, senior managers, or entrepreneurs.

Many travel with their families, placing higher value on education, health care, safety, and stability in addition to reliable digital connectivity.

"From tax efficiency and high-speed connectivity to lifestyle, safety, and ease of doing business, the UAE continues to deliver what today's mobile professionals are looking for," said Andrew Cummings, Head of Residential Agency, Middle East at Savills.

This year's index also highlighted Abu Dhabi's strengths, with the capital earning top marks for internet speed and growing appeal as a modern, safe, and family-oriented city.

Other cities rounding out the top five included Málaga (3rd), Miami (4th), and Lisbon (5th).
