

THE WALL STREET JOURNAL.

DOW JONES | News Corp *****

THURSDAY, APRIL 10, 2025 ~ VOL. CCLXXXV NO. 83

WSJ.com

★★★★ $5.00

DJIA 40608.45 ▲ 2962.86 7.87% NASDAQ 17124.97 ▲ 12.2% STOXX 600 469.89 ▼ 3.5% 10-YR. TREAS. ▼ 1 7/32, yield 4.410% OIL $62.35 ▲ $2.77 GOLD $3,056.50 ▲ $88.10 EURO $1.0950 YEN 147.79

What's News

Business & Finance

- ◆ U.S. stocks soared after Trump announced a 90-day pause on some tariffs and signaled a willingness to negotiate on trade. The S&P 500, Nasdaq and Dow rallied 9.5%, 12.2% and 7.9%, respectively. A1
- ◆ The volatility in financial markets threatened to derail Prada's talks to acquire Versace from fashion conglomerate Capri Holdings. B1
- ◆ Fed officials highlighted the risks of longer-lasting inflationary pressures from tariffs when they agreed to hold interest rates steady at their meeting last month. A7
- ◆ Delta Air Lines abandoned its full-year financial outlook, a move that could serve as a harbinger for reports from other carriers this month. B1
- ◆ Formula One, which Liberty Media bought in 2017, has been shopping a rights package at around $150 million to $180 million a year beginning with the 2026 season. B1
- ◆ China's auto sales rose sharply in March, assisted by government subsidies and relatively muted competition in pricing. B3
- ◆ Volkswagen vehicle deliveries rose in the first quarter after gains in North and South America as well as in Europe compensated for a steep decline in China. B3
- ◆ 7-Eleven's owner projected a rise in annual profit as it continues efforts to stave off a takeover attempt by Couche-Tard, the Canadian owner of Circle K. B3
- ◆ The European Commission said it wanted to develop a network of AI gigafactories to help companies train the most-complex models. B4

World-Wide

- ◆ Trump walked back his steep levies on nearly 100 nations that had taken effect just hours earlier, a reversal that sent stocks soaring despite the president announcing simultaneously that he would raise tariffs on Chinese imports to 125%. A1
- ◆ Republican leaders postponed a vote on Trump's budget plan after a handful of hard-right conservatives argued that it didn't lock in enough spending cuts. A2
- ◆ Defense Secretary Hegseth secured new commitments from Panama, but left some officials there wondering if they were enough to mollify Trump, who has vowed to "take back" the Canal. A8
- ◆ The Trump administration was revising its plan to impose steep port fees on Chinese-built vessels to lessen the impact on U.S. exports. A6
- ◆ Judges in New York and Texas have placed temporary guardrails on President Trump's use of a wartime law to deport some alleged Venezuelan gang members to El Salvador. A3
- ◆ Germany's chancellor-in-waiting clinched a deal to form a new coalition and now must persuade Germans that he can fix the economy and get immigration under control. A8
- ◆ More than 150 Chinese citizens have joined the Russian military to fight against Ukraine, according to Ukrainian intelligence reports viewed by The Wall Street Journal. A8
- ◆ People pleaded for news of loved ones more than a day after a roof collapsed at a nightclub in the Dominican Republic, killing at least 184. A10

CONTENTS	Markets Digest..... B8
Arts in Review..... A13	Opinion..... A15-17
Business & Finance B25	Personal Journal A11-12
Business News..... B3	Sports..... A14
Crossword..... A12	Technology..... B4
From Page One..... A10	U.S. News..... A2-7
Heard on Street..... B11	World News..... A8-9

© 2025 Dow Jones & Company, Inc. All Rights Reserved

Trump Backtracks, Pauses Many Tariffs

China levy boosted to 125% as duties on dozens of countries get a 90-day delay

By GAVIN BADE AND ANNIE LINSKEY

WASHINGTON—President Trump on Wednesday walked back his steep levies on nearly 100 nations that had taken effect just hours earlier, a shocking reversal that sent stocks soaring despite his announcing simultaneously that he would raise tariffs on Chinese imports to 125%.

Trump said his 10%, baseline tariff on virtually all imports would stay in effect. But he paused for 90 days the higher, so-called reciprocal rates he had announced a week earlier on nations the administration views as bad actors on trade—except for China. In an early afternoon social-media post, Trump wrote that he had raised the tariff imposed on China to 125%, “effective immediately.”

An administration official said that Canada and Mexico would remain exempt, for now, from the 10% baseline global tariff. While the U.S.'s neighbors are still subject to plans to impose 25% tariffs on most imports to the U.S., an exemption is still in place for these levies on autos and many other goods compliant with the U.S.-Mexico-Canada free-trade agreement.

Stock-market indexes rose sharply to claw back some of their losses of the past four trading days. The Dow Jones Industrial Average gained nearly 3,000 points Wednesday, or 7.9%; it had fallen by more than 4,500 points in the four days since Trump announced the wide “reciprocal” tariffs.

The S&P 500 rose 9.5% on Wednesday, while the Nasdaq Composite gained 12%.

The president said that he decided to pause the bulk of his reciprocal tariff program because of growing concern about the economy. “They were getting yippy,” Trump said when asked why he enacted a temporary rollback. “They were getting a little bit yippy, a little bit afraid.”

The tariff pause now opens up a 90-day sprint for trading partners to offer Trump deals to reduce their tariffs.

“Nothing is over yet,”

Trump said, adding that somebody needed to take steps to rebalance global trade in the U.S.'s favor. He said countries have come forward to make deals with the U.S.—including China.

On Wednesday, Beijing said it would raise levies on U.S. imports to 84%, from 34%.

The reversal on tariffs shocked even some allies close to Trump, who for days

Please turn to page A4

- ◆ Fed officials flag risk of longer inflation..... A7
- ◆ Tariffs aren't the only obstacles to trade..... A7

Index performance since April 2

Stocks Roar Back With S&P 500 Climbing 9.5%

By ALEXANDER OSIPOVICH

U.S. stocks staged a historic rally on Wednesday after President Trump paused steep tariffs on most countries for 90 days and signaled a willingness to negotiate on trade, with the market adding a record $5.1 trillion in value.

The afternoon gains brought welcome relief from the turmoil triggered by Trump's own shocking announcement of sweeping tariffs a week ago. Still, in the same Truth Social post, he further escalated an economic conflict with China, the world's second-largest economy.

The stock market is still down from where it stood before the April 2 announcement. And the president's trade war, which has consumed Wall Street's attention for weeks, appeared far from over.

“I just don't believe this is an all-clear signal for markets,” said Christopher Smart, managing partner of Arbroath Group, a geopolitical risk consulting firm. “There will still be a bumpy road ahead with a lot of uncertainty around tariffs.”

All three major stock indexes ended the day with moves unseen since some of the most volatile stretches in recent decades.

The S&P 500 jumped 9.5%, its largest one-day percentage gain since the financial crisis of 2008. The Dow Jones Industrial Average surged more than 2,900 points, or 7.9%—its biggest daily increase ever in point terms and the biggest percentage gain since the coronavirus swept the globe in March 2020. The technology-heavy Nasdaq Composite soared 12%, its highest one-day jump since the dot-com era.

Stocks in Asia extended the gains early Thursday. In particular, Japan's Nikkei 225 Stock Average was up about 8% in the morning.

Some of the day's biggest U.S. winners were the Magnificent Seven tech stocks that were battered during the tariff selloff. Shares of Nvidia rallied 19%, increasing the chip maker's value by $439.9 billion,

Please turn to page A4

- ◆ Heard on the Street: Fallout remains despite U-turn... B11

China, Still Main Target, Holds Trade-War Arsenal

By LINGLING WEI

In the years since President Trump's first trade war with China, Beijing has built an arsenal of tools to hit the U.S. where it hurts. Now, it is getting ready to deploy them in full.

China increased tariffs on all U.S. imports to 84%, a response to new U.S. tariffs on Chinese imports of 104% that went into effect at midnight

Wednesday. It also added six U.S. companies, including defense and aerospace-related firms Shield AI and Sierra Nevada to a trade blacklist, and imposed export controls on a dozen U.S. companies including manufacturer American Photonics and Brinc Drones.

The broad set of countermeasures appeared to have further provoked Trump, who moved on Wednesday to pause

Please turn to page A6

President Watched TV, Heard Dire Warnings, Then Gave In

President Trump finally blinked.

It took a week for the plunge in the stock and bond markets—along with a sustained campaign by executives, lawmakers, lobbyists and foreign leaders—to prompt Trump to roll back for 90 days a major element of his sweeping tariff plan.

The president, a Republican, said that the reaction to the

By Annie Linskey, Josh Dawsey and Meredith McGraw tariff program was getting a bit “yippy”—like a nervous athlete unable to perform—and he relied on his instincts to change course as he watched the bond market tank and listened to business leaders including JPMorgan Chase CEO

Jamie Dimon express fears of a recession. The episode was quintessential Trump: He took a drastic action, kept a close eye on the reaction, kept advisers and allies guessing and then changed course.

In this case, the extraordinary reversal was announced via Trump's social-media platform just hours after so-called reciprocal tariffs went into effect

Please turn to page A4

Are E-Bikes a Godsend Or Paving the Road to Perdition?

As the bikes spread in Ohio Amish country, so does the fear they will undermine values

By SCOTT CALVERT

BERLIN, Ohio—Electric bikes have become ubiquitous in the world's second-largest Amish settlement, routinely flying past the horse-drawn buggies that have trundled across the hilly countryside here for two centuries. Not everyone is rolling with it.

The angst voiced by some Amish isn't about the motors that propel e-bikes to nearly 30 miles an hour. It's about the mobility the bikes enable, and the implications of that independence.

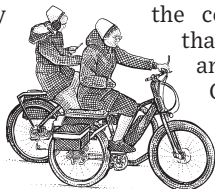

“We could easily end up with not having many Amish people around anymore,” said Mart Miller, a 67-year-old market worker who is the bishop of a church district, akin to a parish, that rejects e-bikes.

Many Amish e-bike enthusiasts, by contrast, see them as tools to make life easier without harming the insular Christian society known for its plain dress, prohibition of cars and wariness of technology.

The bikes have transformed the community of more than 40,000 people in and around Holmes County. Men, women and teenagers are on the go from before dawn to after dark, often pulling children in trailers. Charging stations abound at businesses alongside hitching posts.

“For me, e-bikes are a good balance,” said Marcus Yoder, who directs the Amish and Mennonite Heritage Center. “We recognize the accessibility that we need in today's world to live well, to preserve our faith, family and community.”

Please turn to page A12

Freewheelin'

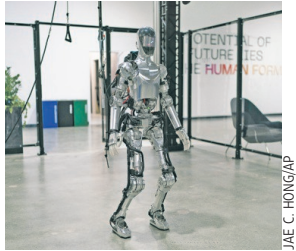

INSIDE

MIKE SEGAR/REUTERS

SPORTS

A Masters tradition of free tickets for public officials raises ethics questions. A14

JAE C. HONG/AP

BUSINESS & FINANCE
Startup's promise of autonomous robots sets off investor frenzy. B1

North Korea Learns In Ukraine Combat

Battlefield experience has taught Russian ally modern warfare skills

At first, it seemed like a typical Russian assault. Glide bombs smashed into the dugouts of Ukrainians from the 225th Separate Assault Regiment, then waves of enemy infantry advanced supported by artillery fire.

By Jane Lytvynenko, Dasl Yoon and Alistair MacDonald

The infantry kept coming in such numbers through fields and forests that the Ukrainians were soon overwhelmed and pulled back across a river. But something was different in this February attack in the village of Sverdlikovo in Russia's Kursk province.

As they took new defensive positions on the opposite bank, the Ukrainians tapped into their opponents' radio channels and heard a language they couldn't understand. Their adversaries were speaking Korean.

The decisive battles in the Kursk region, from which Ukraine's army has now largely retreated, show how North Korean forces adapted outdated tactics for Europe's biggest war since World War II with lightning speed.

Their first forays on the battlefield in December were in large groups without support from artillery, drones or armored vehicles, making them easy targets for Ukrainian defenders.

By February, their large numbers, physical endurance and willingness to advance un-

Please turn to page A10

- ◆ Ukraine says 150 Chinese fighting for Russia..... A8