

THE WALL STREET JOURNAL.

DOW JONES | News Corp *****

TUESDAY, JULY 29, 2025 ~ VOL. CCLXXXVI NO. 24

WSJ.com

★★★★ $5.00

DJIA 44837.56 ▼ 64.36 0.14%

NASDAQ 21178.58 ▲ 0.3%

STOXX 600 548.76 ▼ 0.2%

10-YR. TREAS. ▼ 8/32, yield 4.418%

OIL $66.71 ▲ $1.55

GOLD $3,310.30 ▼ $23.70

EURO $1.1591

YEN 148.56

What's News

Business & Finance

◆ Business leaders turned to determining the winners and losers from a preliminary U.S.-European deal on tariffs and investment struck Sunday in Brussels. A1, A4, A6

◆ Samsung will manufacture artificial-intelligence chips for Tesla in Texas under a $16.5 billion multiyear deal, a major victory for the South Korean company's U.S. foundry business. B1

◆ The Nasdaq and S&P 500 extended their run to records, advancing 0.3% and less than 0.1%, respectively, while the Dow fell 0.1%. B1

◆ Verizon Communications is moving its headquarters to larger office space in Manhattan as it requires more in-office attendance for most managers. B3

◆ The European Commission will investigate Abu Dhabi National Oil Co.'s $13.74 billion acquisition of German chemical company Covestro over concerns about subsidies. B4

◆ Heineken forecast full-year sales volumes to be broadly flat after pricing disputes with retailers in Europe held back beer sales in the second quarter. B3

◆ Audi cut its full-year guidance as U.S. tariffs, restructuring costs and weak market trends retard the automaker's sales and profitability. B3

◆ Shareholders of fintech company Wise affirmed its CEO's supervoting rights that were due to expire next year. B1

◆ Private-equity firm L Catterton bought a majority stake in the maker of an odd-looking putter that caused a sensation at this year's U.S. Open. B3

World-Wide

◆ Trump said the U.S. and Europe would launch a program to deliver food directly to Palestinians in Gaza as a deadly hunger crisis grips the territory. A1

◆ A gunman opened fire inside a Manhattan office building, killing a police officer and three other people and wounding another before taking his own life. A3

◆ Trump shortened the deadline for Russian President Putin to reach a cease-fire with Ukraine or face more economic pressure from the U.S. A16

◆ A majority of Americans continue to support the president's goal of cracking down on illegal immigration, but say his approach has gone too far. A3

◆ Judges who find the government has overstepped are making clear that relief remains available to plaintiffs even after a Supreme Court ruling limiting universal injunctions. A1

◆ The Trump administration is considering a plan to raise billions of dollars with a new fee that would transform the patent system. A3

◆ Former Gov. Roy Cooper of North Carolina launched a Senate bid in what is set to be a high-profile race. A3

◆ The U.S.-made Himars artillery system is being upgraded to improve its range and targeting capability. A16

◆ A cyberattack hit Russian state-owned flagship carrier Aeroflot, forcing it to cancel more than 100 flights. A16

◆ Died: Wallis Annenberg, 86, billionaire philanthropist. A2
◆ Ryne Sandberg, 65, Baseball Hall of Famer. A2

CONTENTS		Markets.....	B10
Arts in Review.....	A11	Opinion.....	A13-15
Business & Finance.....	B2	Personal Journal	A9-10
Business News.....	B3	Sports.....	A12
Crossword.....	A11	Technology.....	B4
Heard on Street.....	B10	U.S. News.....	A2-6
Market Data.....	B7	World News.....	A7,A16

© 2025 Dow Jones & Company, Inc. All Rights Reserved

Four Killed in Manhattan Office Tower Shooting

CARNAGE ON PARK AVENUE: Emergency teams responded to a shooting Monday at a building on Park Avenue in New York City. The gunman shot five people, four of them fatally, and killed himself, according to Mayor Eric Adams. A3, WSJ.com

U.S. and Europe Will Provide More Aid to Gaza, Trump Says

President calls food crisis in the enclave a 'terrible situation'; 'get rid of those lines'

By SHAYNDI RAICE

TEL AVIV—President Trump said the U.S. and Europe would launch a program to deliver food directly to Palestinians in Gaza as a deadly hunger crisis grips the territory, challenging Israeli Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu's appraisal of the humanitarian situation there.

Speaking in Scotland with U.K. Prime Minister Keir Starmer, Trump described the food crisis in Gaza as a "terrible situation." He said the U.S. would set up food centers "in conjunction with some very good people," and fund the effort along with European nations.

It wasn't immediately clear whether Trump was referring to a new American effort to get food into Gaza or an expansion of an existing Israeli-backed program called the Gaza Humanitarian Foundation, which uses an American contractor to distribute aid.

GHF, which began distributing aid in May, has struggled to deliver sufficient aid to Gazans and has been beset by violence near some of its food distribution sites. Local health authorities say hundreds have been killed near the sites. Israel's military acknowledges shooting at crowds but says the number of deaths is inflated.

Asked how new food-distribution sites could work, Trump said there would be no physical barriers to people accessing the food. "The people are screaming for the food and they are 35-40 yards away," Trump said, adding that "very strict lines" at current food distribution sites meant people couldn't access the aid. "So we have to get rid of those lines."

A White House spokeswoman said further details of the plan would be forthcoming. An official for the Israeli military branch that coordinates aid said it wasn't aware of any new American or European program.

On Monday, Netanyahu said there "is no starvation in Gaza, no policy of starvation in Gaza and I assure you that we have a commitment to achieve our war goals."

In response to a question about whether he believed Israeli claims that there is no starvation in Gaza, Trump said, "I don't know, I mean based on television, I would say not particularly because those children look very hungry."

Israel has in recent days increased efforts to get more food into Gaza. On Sunday, it announced a tactical pause in military activity for 10 hours every day in parts of the Strip

Please turn to page A7

EU Pledge To Boost Investment Sealed Trade Deal

Agreement is biggest signal yet others see Trump's tariff regime as permanent

Soon after he sat down to negotiate Sunday with European officials on a potential tariff agreement at one of his Scotland golf resorts, President Trump said he wanted assurances that Europe would follow through on its pledges to increase investment in the U.S.

By Kim Mackrael in Brussels and Brian Schwartz in Washington

Trump questioned how the U.S. could be certain that European companies wouldn't shrug off their plans after a deal was agreed upon, according to people familiar with the matter. After EU leaders assured him that the investment plans were real, Trump responded: "Prove it," according to one of the people.

EU officials listed the names of companies they said already were prepared to invest. With a trade deal in place, planned investments of almost $200 billion would grow by even more, they told Trump.

At the end of the talks, Trump said he would impose 15% baseline tariffs on the bloc, instead of the 30% he had threatened. He said the EU would now be investing $600 billion in the U.S. under the deal, which included a separate commitment to buy

Please turn to page A4

- ◆ Tokyo, facing backlash, defends U.S. trade deal... A4
- ◆ The ins and outs of U.S.-EU commerce..... A4
- ◆ Sigh of relief as trade war is averted..... A6
- ◆ A $750 billion energy buy won't come easily..... A6

INSIDE

PERSONAL JOURNAL
'Wasteland' becomes paradise as Monet's gardens return to their former glory. A10

JASON GAY
Tadej Pogacar turned the sport's hardest competition into a race for runner-up. A12

Tiny Company Is Vouching For Risky Insurers

Demotech's ratings enable small providers to enter hurricane country; string of failures has left homeowners in the lurch

LaPlace, La., is the sort of town that is becoming a no-go zone for major insurance companies. Sandwiched between the Mississippi River and Lake

By Jean Eaglesham, Susan Pulliam and Caitlin Ostroff

Pontchartrain outside of New Orleans, it is only about 10 feet above sea level and has an alarming history of serious storms and flooding.

So Nadia Hart was happy that Lighthouse Excaltur Insurance, a small Louisiana insurer with an "A" rating for financial stability, was willing to write a policy on her three-bedroom house in town. "My broker told me that they were a good insurance company, a good rating, and so I went with them," she said.

With climate disasters driving many big nationwide insurers out of risky markets in Louisiana, Florida and elsewhere, smaller companies such as Lighthouse have stepped in to fill the gap. And many are getting a critical stamp of approval from Demotech, a tiny Ohio rating company with a unique take on grading financial stability. It rates 98% of the insurers A, for "exceptional," or the even better A Prime or A Double Prime.

But Demotech's rosy outlook doesn't always pan out.

Please turn to page A8

Who's Afraid of a Little Bacteria? Not These Swimmers

* * *

Parisians and tourists line up for a dip in the Seine after a centurylong ban; red flags

By NOEMIE BISSEBIE AND EVE HARTLEY

PARIS—The promise of a swim in a cleaned-up Seine was an enticing bribe for Parisians forced to put up with the throngs of tourists who descended on their city for last year's Olympics.

But floating next to Notre Dame or the Eiffel Tower is less magical when it rains. It's not even possible.

The day after the river opened to public swimming for the first time since 1923, officials hoisted a red flag and promptly closed it again. Water-quality tests showed rainfall upstream had led to a high concentration of bacteria.

Swimming resumed a few days later when the weather cleared, but then the city had to evacuate the swimming site near the Eiffel Tower. A life-guard had fished out what was later identified by police as an animal lung of an as yet unspecified species.

In all, the three Seine swimming spots have been closed roughly half the time since the river was reopened July 5, leading at times to long lines when they are open, and some doubts as to whether doing the breaststroke in the Seine is a particularly good idea.

"It is a little tempting, but I'm scared of getting eczema," said Pauline Mussat.

The 32-year-old dentist had joined the crowds watching bathers take a dip near the picturesque Île Saint-Louis. "I think I'll send Laurent first," she said with a smile, nodding toward the young man sitting next to her.

Local authorities invested

Please turn to page A8

Judges Keep Stymieing Administration's Moves

WASHINGTON—When the Supreme Court issued a blockbuster decision in June limiting the authority of federal judges to halt Trump administration policies nationwide, the president was quick to pronounce the universal injunction all but dead.

By Louise Radnofsky, Mariah Timms and Jess Bravin

One month later, states, organizations and individuals challenging government actions are finding a number of ways to notch wins against the White House, with judges in a growing list of cases making clear that sweeping relief remains available when they find the government has over-stepped its authority.

In at least nine cases, judges have explicitly grappled with the Supreme Court's opinion and granted nationwide relief anyway. That includes rulings that continue to halt the policy at the center of the high court case: President Trump's effort to pare back birthright citizenship. Judges also have kept in place protections against deportations for up to 500,000 Haitians, halted mass layoffs at the Department of Health and Human Services and prevented the government from terminating a legal-aid program for mentally ill people in immigration proceedings.

Please turn to page A2

- ◆ Voters like immigration curbs, fault the tactics... A3