Amid panic over Reform surge, Labour
FINALLY gets tough on foreign offenders

COMMIT ANY CRIME AND YOU'RE OUT, MIGRANTS TO BE WARNED

MIGRANTS could be kicked out of the country if they commit ANY crime under a planned government crackdown.

Currently, foreign criminals are only reported to the Home Office if they receive a jail sentence – and only those given a year behind bars are usually considered for deportation.

But Labour is set to rip up those rules as it tries to get a grip on immigration and see off the growing threat posed by Nigel Farage's rampant Reform UK party.

Under Home Secretary Yvette Cooper's plans, the Home Office will be told of all foreign nationals convicted of any offence, while officials will be given wider powers to remove them from the UK.

The move intends to close the loophole which means migrants can carry out knife crimes, thefts, criminal damage and violence against women without
