

KENNY HOLSTON/THE NEW YORK TIMES

Fighting Through Snow and Subzero Temperatures
As world powers begin to compete for the Arctic, the U.S. Army tests its troops, tactics and equipment at a vast training site near the Arctic Circle in Alaska. Page A22.

Indiana Proves
Grip of Trump
Is Still Strong

By NICK CORASANITI and SHANE GOLDMACHER

Even as President Trump's popularity sags amid an unpopular war and soaring gas prices, his success Tuesday in ousting a group of Republican state lawmakers in Indiana who had crossed him showed that he continued to hold a viselike grip on a critical core of the Republican base.

For all the talk of divisions within the MAGA movement over the war in Iran, the results in Indiana on Tuesday showed that Mr. Trump can still inspire the kind of voters who will turn out to vote when he asks them to. In this case, it was for revenge: The challengers Mr. Trump backed defeated at least five of the seven Republican incumbents in the Indiana Legislature who had defied his call to draw new congressional maps ahead of the midterms.

Victories in a low-turnout Republican primary do not mean that Republican fortunes are improving ahead of the midterm elections. The party still faces an uphill battle to keep control of Congress, amid intense headwinds from the unpopular Iran war and growing economic anxiety.

But in these races, Mr. Trump and his allies were able to vastly outspend the incumbents and

Continued on Page A17

TED TURNER, 1938-2026

A Wild-Mannered Mogul Who Transformed TV

By JONATHAN KANDELL

Ted Turner, the media mogul who cut a brash and vivid figure on the American scene of the late 20th century by dominating the cable television industry, creating the 24-hour news cycle with CNN, and extending his restless reach into professional sports, environmentalism and philanthropy, died on Wednesday at his home near Tallahassee, Fla. He was 87.

Phillip Evans, a spokesman for the family, confirmed the death. Mr. Turner announced in 2018 that he had Lewy body dementia, a progressive brain disorder.

Mr. Turner's signature creation was CNN — the Cable News Network — which revolutionized television news in 1980 by presenting it all hours of the day and eventually inspiring other media operations to follow suit. But his portfolio of business ventures bulged with much more, and their impact on American culture was considerable.

As a spinoff of CNN, Mr. Turner created the channel CNN Headline News and CNN International. He founded the cable and satellite sports and entertainment "superstation" that became known as TBS and spawned a sister channel, TNT, both of which continue to reach millions of homes.

In 1985, he bought for $1.5 billion the MGM studio's library of films and nine years later created the cable franchise Turner Classic Movies, or TCM. He made a similar purchase of Hanna-Barbera cartoons and, relying on them, created the Cartoon Network in 1992. And in 1996, he merged his conglomerate, Turner Broadcasting System, with Time Warner to create one of the world's largest media companies.

Along the way, he found the time and energy to captain the winning yacht in the America's Cup race in 1977 and to take an active role as owner of the Atlanta Braves, giving the team extended national exposure on Turner-owned television.

"I'm trying to set the all-time record for achievement by one person in one lifetime," he told the journalist Dale Van Atta in a Read-Work — which revolutionized television news in 1980 by presenting it all hours of the day and eventually inspiring other media operations to follow suit. But his portfolio of business ventures bulged with much more, and their impact on American culture was considerable.

As a spinoff of CNN, Mr. Turner created the channel CNN Headline News and CNN International. He founded the cable and satellite sports and entertainment "superstation" that became known as TBS and spawned a sister channel, TNT, both of which continue to reach millions of homes.

In 1985, he bought for $1.5 billion the MGM studio's library of films and nine years later created the cable franchise Turner Classic Movies, or TCM. He made a similar purchase of Hanna-Barbera cartoons and, relying on them, created the Cartoon Network in 1992. And in 1996, he merged his conglomerate, Turner Broadcasting System, with Time Warner to create one of the world's largest media companies.

Along the way, he found the time and energy to captain the winning yacht in the America's Cup race in 1977 and to take an active role as owner of the Atlanta Braves, giving the team extended national exposure on Turner-owned television.

"I'm trying to set the all-time record for achievement by one person in one lifetime," he told the journalist Dale Van Atta in a Read-

Continued on Page A24

NANCY MANGIAFICO/ATLANTA JOURNAL-CONSTITUTION, VIA ASSOCIATED PRESS

Ted Turner at his desk at the CNN Center in Atlanta in 1982.

Pain at Pump
Not the Same
State by State

By EMMETT LINDNER

The price of gasoline has gone up around 50 percent in the United States since the war in Iran began, but that average can mask big differences across the country.

A gallon of regular fuel cost $4.54 on average on Wednesday, according to the AAA motor club. But in California, gas averaged $6.16, while it was just $3.96 in Oklahoma. Within those states, prices at the pump differed greatly from county to county and city to city.

More than half of the price of gasoline is tied directly to the price of oil, according to the Energy Information Administration, a federal research agency. Since the United States and Israel began attacking Iran on Feb. 28, a barrel of Brent crude, the international benchmark, has risen more than 50 percent.

Much of the state-to-state and city-to-city variance in the price of gas has to do with the location of oil refineries, the logistics of getting fuel to the pump, state taxes and regulations, and competition among gas stations.

For starters, it costs a lot to transport gas.

Continued on Page A8

HARDEST HIT People with lower incomes are driving less as gas prices climb higher. PAGE B1

Did You Hear the One About the Pope Calling Customer Service?

By JULIE BOSMAN

CHICAGO — Even the Vicar of Christ can be thwarted by a customer service representative.

About two months after Robert Francis Prevost, a Chicago-born cardinal, became Pope Leo XIV in Vatican City, he put in a call to his bank back home, a close friend, the Rev. Tom McCarthy, told a gathering of Catholics in Naperville, Ill., last week.

The new pope identified himself as Robert Prevost, saying that he wished to change the phone number and address that the bank had on file, Father McCarthy said.

The pope dutifully answered the security questions correctly.

Then, the woman on the line for the bank told him that it wasn't enough — he would have to come to the branch in person.

"He said, 'Well, I'm not going to be able to do that,'" Father McCarthy said in a video clip shared on social media, recounting the new pope's growing frustration as the audience laughed. "I gave you all the security questions."

The bank employee apologized. The pope tried a different tack.

"Would it matter to you if I told you I'm Pope Leo?" he asked, according to Father McCarthy.

She hung up.

Even while leading more than one billion Catholics around the world and living in gilded splendor amid priceless works of art,

Even for Him, Dealing With the Bank Can Require a Miracle

popes can sometimes be entangled in the mundane, both accidentally and with purpose. In the first 24 hours of Pope Francis' papacy in 2013, he insisted on paying his own hotel bill and collecting his own luggage, a gesture of humility to Catholic clergy.

Pope Leo rose from modest roots in Dolton, Ill., a small suburb just outside Chicago, before serving as a bishop in Peru and in an influential post at the Vatican when he was elected pope nearly one year ago.

The matter was sorted out thanks to the intervention of another priest who had a connection to the bank president, Father McCarthy said.

There was no word on the customer service representative who had cut off her call with the bank's most famous customer.

"Could you imagine being known as the woman who hung up on the pope?" Father McCarthy said.

THE WORLD'S POPE Leo has dispelled fears that he might be beholden to Washington. PAGE A7

AGENCE FRANCE-PRESSE — GETTY IMAGES

Clash Over Plan for Virus Ship
Spain said the vessel, gripped by a deadly outbreak, would dock in the Canary Islands, but local officials objected. Page A10.

NATIONAL A11-23

Giuliani Seeks 9/11 Benefit
The former New York mayor suffers from a condition linked to his time at ground zero, his lawyer says. PAGE A20

Shutting Labs That Study Fires
The government targets dozens of sites, including one in Washington State that examines a warming climate. PAGE A11

INTERNATIONAL A4-10

New Reliance on Hezbollah
With Israel demolishing villages in the south, many Lebanese are turning to the group for protection. PAGE A6

Moving On From K-Pop
Ejae, who had a breakout song on the film "Demon Hunters," wants to be more than the face of a genre. PAGE A4

OBITUARIES A24-25, 28

Pulitzer-Winning Photographer
Jack Thornell of The Associated Press captured James Meredith's agony in 1966 after the civil rights pioneer was shot in Mississippi. He was 86. PAGE A28

BUSINESS B1-6

On Tech, Parents Fight Back
Parents nationwide are demanding more sway over the digital tools that schools give children. PAGE B1

New Affordable Housing Script
Local governments investing in construction don't want a high rate of return, just cheaper rents. PAGE B1

SPORTS B7-10

He Has His Grandmother's Grit
As Donovan Mitchell of the Cavaliers tries to finally advance past the second round, he relies on self-belief that stems from a special relationship. PAGE B7

THURSDAY STYLES D1-7

Kentucky Derby's Top Hats
At the 152nd annual horse race at Churchill Downs, attendees trotted out some eye-catching ensembles. PAGE D7

Our Favorite Met Gala Looks
We chose 15 people who dressed the best for the event. It is no surprise that Beyoncé, below, made the list. PAGE D4

ARTS C1-7

Dancing With a Crowd
For her second commission at City Ballet, the principal dancer Tiler Peck is working with a cast of 40. PAGE C1

How 'Prada 2' Hits Differently
The sequel's portrait of the work lives of a young journalist and a top editor holds lessons for many of us. PAGE C1

OPINION A26-27

Kristen Soltis Anderson PAGE A27

