UAE rejects Sudan allegations

This is merely the latest failed attempt to lecture on the rule of law, official says

GENEVA

The UAE has affirmed that it is exercising its right of reply in response to false and baseless accusations made earlier on Wednesday by a party to the conflict in Sudan whose hands are stained with the blood of its own people.

This came in a statement delivered by Shahad Matar, Deputy Permanent Representative of the UAE to the United Nations and other International Organizations in Geneva during the State's participation in the 61st session of the Human Rights Council, currently convening in Geneva.

Sabotaging peace efforts

She said: "This is merely the latest failed attempt to lecture this hall on the rule of law. This party stands accused of war crimes against their own population and has systematically sabotaged time and time again any sincere regional and international effort to achieve a diplomatic solution to the conflict."

Meanwhile, the UAE has renewed its commitment to empowering women, consolidating gender equality and protecting the rights of children, according to a statement given by Jamal Al Musharakh, UAE Ambassador and Permanent Representative to the United Nations and other International Organisations in Geneva.

Al Musharakh said that the UAE continues to promote human rights, empower women and strengthen their leadership role, and to consolidate gender equality in a manner that ensures the full protection of the rights of women and girls and supports the safeguarding of children's rights.

US, Iran hold crucial talks to avert war

THE SIDES SHOWED 'UNPRECEDENTED OPENNESS' TO NEW IDEAS, OMAN SAYS

DUBAI

Iran and the United States held another round of indirect nuclear talks in Geneva yesterday, as Washington continues one of its largest military buildups in the Middle East in decades, raising regional tensions.

The Oman-mediated discussions, hosted at the Omani ambassador's residence, are aimed at constraining Tehran's nuclear programme and averting potential conflict. US President Donald Trump has warned of possible military action, recently giving Iran a deadline to reach a deal.

Iranian Foreign Minister Abbas Araghchi, leading Tehran's delegation, warned that any US attack could trigger a devastating regional war, saying American bases across the region would be considered legitimate targets. "There would be no victory for anybody — it would be a devastating war," Araghchi said ahead of the talks.

While Tehran insists the negotiations focus solely on its nuclear activities, Washington has pushed for curbs on Iran's missile programme and regional influence. Secretary of State Marco Rubio described Iran's refusal to discuss ballistic missiles as "a big, big problem," though he stressed the US prefers diplomacy.

Rafael Grossi present

Before the talks were adjourned for three hours, Oman's Foreign Minister Badr Albusaidi said the sides showed "unprecedented openness" to new ideas. UN nuclear watchdog chief Rafael Grossi was also reported to have joined the discussions.

Trump, in his State of the Union address, accused Iran of pursuing "sinister nuclear ambitions," claims dismissed by Tehran as "big lies." Iran says its nuclear programme is civilian and denies seeking atomic weapons.

Separately, lawyers in Switzerland filed a complaint accusing Iranian deputy foreign minister Kazem Gharibabadi of crimes against humanity linked to recent protests, calling for his arrest.
