Widely condemned ad stokes Ohio race

Backlash even from Republicans, but Vance defends it

COLUMBUS, Ohio — When Ann Vance, a 52-year-old teacher, saw the most recent campaign commercial from Republican Ohio gubernatorial hopeful Vivek Ramaswamy, she was so disgusted that she rushed out to vote early in the state's heavily contested election.

The ad in question — which has drawn widespread and bipartisan condemnation — features Donna Arthur, the estranged mother of Ramaswamy's opponent, Democrat Amy Acton, accusing her daughter of being a liar who can't be trusted.

"That made me come vote today for Amy Acton because I thought, 'What a piece of crap,' " said Vance, who said she leans "left" and is no relation to the vice president. "That is such a terrible, lowdown way of approaching any kind of election that I will just respond by going out, putting my vote in faster."

The commercial was first leaked online to an Ohio political blogger Tuesday, who said he received it from a voter who was shown the ad as part of a purported poll. It was immediately elevated by conservative social media voices, but also prompted swift backlash because of its unspoken backstory: Acton was removed from her mother's custody at age 12 after accusing her mother's husband of sexual abuse. The husband was criminally charged, according to Acton, court records, and

As least five other residents of an assisted living facility in Hopkinton were transferred out over heat-related issues in the three weeks after an 86-year-old woman was found dead in her room where the temperature registered 99 degrees, the town's health director said Wednesday.

In all, three dozen people were transferred from the Communities at Golden Pond between Oct. 1 and Oct. 17 following the death of Sheila Szczypinski, who was found unresponsive in her bed in stifling heat, the health director, Shaun McAuliffe, said in a statement. It's still unclear how many of those 36 were related to heat concerns and McAuliffe also did not say where the residents were taken.

Nonetheless, interviews with a former resident and a relative indicated that uncomfortably warm conditions had cropped up prior to her death.

Suit accuses ex-R.I. bishop of sex abuse

An altar boy in the 1980s is first to point finger at Gelineau, who died in 2024

PROVIDENCE — A new lawsuit alleges that Bishop Louis E. Gelineau, the former leader of the Roman Catholic Diocese of Providence, raped an altar boy at St. Luke's Church in Barrington in the 1980s.

Gelineau, who died in 2024 at age 96, has never before been publicly accused of sexually abusing children.

For 25 years, Gelineau oversaw a system where priests accused of abuse were moved from parish to parish and to treatment centers and back, keeping those incidents quiet.

Now, the former altar boy, a Newport man who is 56, is suing the diocese for abuse that he said he Republican gubernatorial nominee Mike Minogue's social media team is doing its best to position him as a regular guy who lifts weights and "splits the G" while downing a gulp of Guinness.

Meanwhile, on Instagram, Democratic Governor Maura Healey's reelection camp has a different take on Minogue. "MAGA Mike," her campaign declares in big, bold type, supports "ICE tearing families apart" and "defunding education."

The Massachusetts race, like most campaigns these days, is playing out on TikTok and Instagram as much as on TV and traditional media. Healey's and Minogue's accounts provide a glimpse of whom they've hoped Tod Machover gets why so many Americans see artificial intelligence as an existential threat. And yet the composer and faculty director of the Media Lab at MIT is installing it in the last place that would seem to want or need it: on stage at Symphony Hall, playing alongside some of the most accomplished classical musicians in the world.

In his composition "already and not yet," premiering Thursday with the Boston Symphony Orchestra, an AI system will improvise and add its own music as the players perform. Under the baton of Kent Nagano, the piece will be performed through Saturday and comes amid the orchestra's week of "Technology and Our Humanity" themed programming.

And even Machover cannot predict exactly the music it will play.

But he wants to be clear: He is not out to show that human musicians can be replaced by ma-
