P2JW275000-5-A00100-16DDF61078D

THE WALL STREET JOURNAL.

DOW JONES | News Corp ★★★★★ THURSDAY, OCTOBER 2, 2025 ~ VOL. CCLXXXVI NO. 79 WSJ.com ★★★★ $5.00

DJIA 46441.10 ▲ 43.21 0.09% NASDAQ 22755.16 ▲ 0.4% STOXX 600 564.62 ▲ 1.2% 10-YR. TREAS. ▲ 11/32, yield 4.105% OIL $61.78 ▼ $0.59 GOLD $3,867.50 ▲ $26.70 EURO $1.1732 YEN 147.08

What's News

Business & Finance

◆ Walmart said it was working to remove synthetic dyes from all its store-brand foods and plans to eliminate 30 other ingredients, ranging from certain artificial sweeteners to preservatives. B1

◆ Strength in pharmaceutical stocks helped lift the S&P 500 and Dow industrials to records, up 0.3% and 0.1%, respectively, while the Nasdaq rose 0.4%. B11

◆ The U.S. shed 32,000 private-sector jobs in September, payroll-processing company ADP said. A2

◆ Meta Platforms will start using people's conversations with its chatbot to help personalize ads and content, offering a glimpse of how the company intends to pay for its expensive AI efforts. B4

◆ Microsoft Chief Executive Satya Nadella is handing off some responsibilities, citing a need to focus on the company's biggest artificial-intelligence bets. B4

◆ Investors are putting more money than ever into exchange-traded funds, and Washington just took a step that all but ensures the billions will keep flowing. B1

◆ Conagra reported lower profit and sales for its fiscal first quarter, hurt by inflationary pressures and budget-conscious shoppers who continue to cut back on snacks. B3

◆ Luxury fashion group Brunello Cucinelli posted higher sales for the third quarter as clients continued to buy its latest collections. B3

World-Wide

◆ Hours into the government shutdown, the White House issued new threats, congressional leaders were digging in and some rank-and-file Democrats and Republicans were searching for a way out. A1, A4

◆ The U.S. will provide Ukraine with intelligence for long-range missile strikes on Russian energy targets as the Trump administration weighs sending Kyiv weapons to reach farther into Russia. A1

◆ The Supreme Court allowed Fed governor Lisa Cook to keep her job for now and set arguments for January on Trump's bid to fire her. A1

◆ The Trump administration is asking universities to sign a compact in which they would agree to terms, including regulating their political climates, in exchange for preferential access to federal funds. A1

◆ Hamas indicated it is open to accepting Trump's peace plan for Gaza but asked for more time to review its conditions. A6

◆ French authorities detained crew members of a tanker carrying Russian crude oil and are investigating whether it played a role in last week's drone incursions in Denmark. A7

◆ Rescuers continued their efforts to free boys trapped in the rubble of a collapsed Islamic school in Indonesia. A16

◆ Trump extended NATO-like security promises to Qatar. A16

◆ Died: Jane Goodall, 91, primatologist and author. A5

QUARTERLY MARKET REVIEW

Investors put more into ETFs. B1, B5, B6

CONTENTS

Arts in Review..... A11
Business & Finance B2-3,10
Capital Account..... A2
Crossword..... A12
Heard on Street... B11
Markets..... B11
Markets Digest..... B7
Opinion..... A13-15
Personal Journal A9-10
Sports..... A12
Technology..... B4
U.S. News..... A2-5
World News... A6-7,16

© 2025 Dow Jones & Company, Inc. All Rights Reserved

Parties Fight to Cast Shutdown Blame

GRACE BEAHM ALFORD/THE POST AND COURIER/AP

As the shutdown took effect Wednesday, a park ranger helped close Fort Sumter National Monument in Charleston, S.C.

Some in Congress seek path to accord as White House eyes layoffs this week

WASHINGTON—Hours into the government shutdown, the White House issued new threats, congressional leaders were digging in, and some rank-and-file Democrats and Republicans were searching for a way out.

*By Lindsay Wise, Olivia Beavers and Alex Leary

Senate Majority Leader John Thune (R., S.D.) and Vice President JD Vance said they are open to talking to Democrats about extending expiring healthcare subsidies but won't negotiate as long as the government is closed. Democratic leaders said they won't agree to reopen the government until their healthcare demands—at least some of them—are met.

Please turn to page A4

◆ Trump's budget chief seizes the moment..... A4

Fed's Cook, Targeted By Trump, Can Keep Job for Now

By Lydia Wheeler And Nick Timiraos

WASHINGTON—The Supreme Court on Wednesday allowed Federal Reserve Governor Lisa Cook to keep her job for now and scheduled arguments in January to weigh President Trump's bid to fire her.

The court in a brief order deferred a decision on the Trump administration's emergency request to remove Cook from the central bank's independent board while a lawsuit challenging her dismissal proceeds.

The justices on several occasions have allowed Trump to fire officials at other government agencies, but they also have signaled they believe the Fed is unique and enjoys more protections from presidential intervention. By placing the case on its argument calendar, the court bought itself more time to consider the issue and dealt at least a mild setback to the president.

The move also gives Cook more time to rebut allegations that she misrepresented personal information about two mortgages she obtained in 2021, weeks apart, for homes that her loan documents said would be primary residences.

Trump, who has been pressuring the Fed to lower interest rates since taking office, moved to fire Cook in August, citing the mortgage fraud allegations. He said the alleged conduct called into question her competence and trustworthiness as a finan-

Please turn to page A2

U.S. to Provide Kyiv With Intelligence For Missile Strikes Deep Inside Russia

The U.S. will provide Ukraine with intelligence for long-range missile strikes on Russia's energy infrastructure, American officials said, as the Trump administration weighs sending Kyiv powerful weapons that could put in range more targets within Russia.

*By Bojan Pancevski, Alexander Ward and Lara Seligman

President Trump recently signed off on allowing intelligence agencies and the Pentagon to aid Kyiv with the strikes. U.S. officials are asking North Atlantic Treaty Organization allies to provide similar support, these people said.

The expanded intelligence-sharing with Kyiv is the latest sign that Trump is deepening support for Ukraine as his efforts to advance talks to end the war have stalled.

It is the first time, officials said, that the Trump administration will aid Ukrainian strikes with long-range missiles against energy targets deep inside Russian territory.

While the U.S. has long assisted Kyiv's drone-and-missile attacks, the intelligence sharing means Ukraine will be better able to hit refineries, pipelines, power stations and other infrastructure far from its borders, with the goal of depriving the Kremlin of revenue and oil to sustain its invasion.

The U.S. is also weighing deliveries of Tomahawks and Barracudas and other U.S.-made ground- and air-launched missiles that have ranges of around 500 miles, other administration officials said. No decision on what to send—if anything—has been made, the officials said.

The intelligence, combined with more-powerful weapons, could have a far more potent effect than Ukraine's previous strikes in Russia, causing greater damage to its energy infrastructure and tying up Russian air defenses.

U.S. officials are awaiting written guidance from the White House before sharing the necessary intelligence, one official said.

A spokesman for the Defense Intelligence Agency said he couldn't comment on continuing or active intelligence operations. A spokeswoman for the Central Intelligence

Please turn to page A6

◆ Europe aims to tap Russian billions for Kyiv..... A6
◆ Denmark faces impact of support for Ukraine..... A7

Chimps' Champion Dies at 91

STEPHEN ROBINSON/UPPA/ZUMA PRESS

IN THE WILD: Primatologist Jane Goodall studied chimpanzee behavior for decades in Africa. For a video interview with her about her life's work, scan the code with the obituary on A5.

Trump Asks Schools To Sign Funds Pact

By Natalie Andrews And Douglas Belkin

The Trump administration is laying out a set of operating principles that it wants universities to agree to in exchange for preferential access to federal funds.

The expansive 10-point memo, dubbed the "Compact for Academic Excellence in Higher Education," puts forth a wide-ranging set of terms the administration says are intended to elevate university standards and performance. Universities that sign on will get "multiple positive benefits," including "substantial and meaningful federal grants," says a letter addressed to university leaders.

"Our hope is that a lot of schools see that this is highly reasonable," said May Mailman, senior adviser for special projects at the White House.

The memo demands that schools ban the use of race or sex in hiring and admissions, freeze tuition for five years, cap international undergrad enrollment at 15%, require that applicants take the SAT or similar test and quell grade inflation.

Much of the document focuses on the campus political climate.

The compact asks universities to ensure a "vibrant marketplace of ideas on campus" and to bar employees from expressing political views on behalf of their employer, unless the matter affects the school. It seeks to create a more welcoming environment for conservatives, asking colleges to make governance changes and

Please turn to page A5

America's Dog-Loving Capital Has Had Enough of Your Pooch

* * *

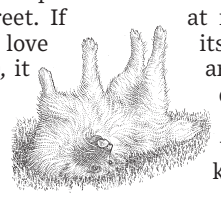
In San Francisco, pets roam sports bars, cafes and gyms; licked during sit-ups

By Katherine Bindley

Rose Crelli loves dogs. The violinist grew up with sled dogs in Alaska. She stops to pet dogs on the street. If she had to rate her love on a scale of 1 to 10, it would be a 10.

But Crelli, 29, has started thinking maybe San Francisco is too dog-friendly. While she and a friend were having coffee at Alamo Square park, the pair were approached by five different off-leash dogs in an area that requires dogs be leashed. The final visitor, a golden retriever, sent Crelli over the edge.

"It literally launched itself at my pastry and got its mouth all over it and covered it with drool," she said. The dog's owner saw the whole thing and kept walking.



Up in arms

Virginia may be for lovers, but San Francisco is for dog lovers. It has sprawling green spaces, treats behind every

Please turn to page A10

Student-Loan Debt Is Strangling Gen X

Borrowers hoped for upward mobility. Many were left instead with regret: 'I'm going to be working until the day I die.'

By Oyin Adedoyin

One of the most enduring relationships of Rick Betancur's adult life is with his student debt.

The federal loans have followed him for more than 26 years, longer than he's been married. While his family has doubled with the addition of two children, his $74,000 in graduate school debt has more than quadrupled to $300,000.

When the 55-year-old New Jersey chiropractor looks at his current balance, he is stupefied. He's made enough payments toward the loan throughout the years to cover the initial amount he borrowed, but it's been buried in decades of mounting interest.

His balance continues to accrue interest—and repercussions, most recently the denial of a home-equity loan application. Decades of payments meant Betancur wasn't able to save for retirement until later in life. Today he has a little over $200,000 saved, a fraction of the seven times one's salary Fidelity Investments recommends workers have by 55.

Gen X is barreling toward retirement with an excruciating student-loan burden. The six million-plus borrowers aged 50 to 61 have the highest average balance of any age group, at $47,857, according to Federal Student Aid data. Now, as parents and grandparents, they

Please turn to page A7