

Chicago Tribune

QUESTIONS? CALL 1-800-TRIBUNE

WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 1, 2025

BREAKING NEWS AT CHICAGOTRIBUNE.COM

Leaders condemn military plan

Broadview mayor rips feds following weeks of protests outside ICE building

By Caroline Kubzansky
Chicago Tribune

Broadview Mayor Katrina Thompson on Tuesday said federal authorities were using disinformation tactics that would “make even Russia blush” following protests around a U.S. Immigration and Customs Enforcement holding facility in the village.

Thompson said village officials were “exploring our options” to force federal agencies to cooperate with local laws and investigations as tensions continue to rise around ICE’s presence in the west suburb.

Thompson, flanked by several other suburban mayors, emergency personnel and former Chicago Mayor Lori Lightfoot, again condemned federal agents’ copious use of chemical crowd controls on people demonstrating in Broad-

Turn to Broadview, Page 4

Broadview Mayor Katrina Thompson speaks during a news conference with other mayors, including Berwyn Mayor Robert Lovero and former Chicago Mayor Lori Lightfoot at Broadview Village Hall on Tuesday. ANTONIO PEREZ/CHICAGO TRIBUNE

Pritzker likens Trump to Putin for telling troops to use cities as a training ground

By Olivia Olander and Jake Sheridan
Chicago Tribune

Top Illinois leaders on Tuesday condemned President Donald Trump’s assertion that cities, including Chicago, should serve as military “training grounds,” even as they maintained there’s little they can do in their official capacities to push back against such an incursion.

“Thinking that that’s some sort of proving ground for war, or that indeed there’s some sort of internal war going on in the United States, is just frankly inane, and I’m concerned for his health,” Gov. JB Pritzker said of Trump, adding that the tactics echoed those of Russian President Vladimir Putin.

Pritzker’s comments in Englewood came shortly after the president told

Turn to Cities, Page 4

NL WILD-CARD SERIES GAME 1 CUBS 3, PADRES 1

STACEY WESCOTT/CHICAGO TRIBUNE

Fans wild for Cubs playoff win

Seiya Suzuki and the Cubs turn on a “playoff switch,” riding back-to-back homers in the fifth inning to a 3-1 win in Game 1 of the wild-card series over the Padres. “I mean, just simply put, it was fantastic,” Suzuki said of his homer. “You just felt the passion of the fans, them cheering us on. Rounding the bases, I felt some nerves obviously, but great feeling overall.” Above, Cubs fans in the bleachers celebrate the win. Game 2 is at 2:08 p.m. Wednesday. Chicago Sports

The revenue, costs of new Bears stadium in Arlington Heights

Development would generate billions, but taxpayer money needed for infrastructure

By Robert McCoppin
Chicago Tribune

Construction of a new Chicago Bears stadium in Arlington Heights would generate thousands of jobs and billions of dollars in economic activity, but would also require substantial taxpayer support for infrastructure, according to team projections released Tuesday.

Infrastructure such as entrance and exit ramps from near Route 53 and changes to the adjacent Metra train line would cost $855 million in public funds, the team’s consultant estimated in its report. The report attempts to assuage concerns about the price tag by pointing to gross state tax revenues of almost $1.3 billion over 40 years, according to projections from HR&A Advisors Inc.

A village consultant’s review of the team’s report also provided new details

The Bears released an economic impact report that included architectural renderings of the proposed stadium in Arlington Heights on Tuesday. MANICA ARCHITECTURE on the size of the proposed mixed-use development around the stadium, with plans to include 1,150 multifamily housing units, two hotels with 400 rooms total, 300,000 square feet of retail and 200,000 square feet of office space.

The 60,000-seat stadium would hold an estimated 370 events a year, with most of those dates being private events and tours, accord-

Turn to Stadium, Page 2

Parties at impasse over funding bill

Federal shutdown looms as Dems vote down GOP plan

By Mary Clare Jalonick, Lisa Mascaro and Stephen Groves
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Senate Democrats voted down a Republican bill to keep funding the government, putting it on a near certain path to a shutdown after midnight Tuesday for the first time in almost seven years.

The 55-45 vote Tuesday on the bill to extend federal funding for seven weeks fell short of the 60 needed to end a filibuster and pass the legislation. It came as Democrats made good on their threat to close the government if President Donald Trump and Republicans didn’t accede to their health care demands.

Senate Democratic Leader Chuck Schumer, D-N.Y., said Republicans are trying to “bully” Democrats by refusing to negotiate on an extension of health care benefits and other priorities.

After the vote, the White House’s Office of Management and Budget issued a memo saying that “affected agencies should now execute their plans for an orderly shutdown.”

A government closure would mean that hundreds of thousands of federal workers could be furloughed or laid off. Trump threatened retribution on Democrats for a potential shutdown, saying Tuesday that it could include “cutting vast numbers of people out, cutting things that they like, cutting programs that they like.”

Instead of negotiating,

Turn to Shutdown, Page 4

Work begins at computing hub

The multibillion-dollar quantum computing campus on the South Side will host companies seeking to develop the next generation of supercomputers. Business

Unexpected drinks revolution

Modern Korean restaurants are rewriting the rules of food and beverage pairings and have become the vanguard of daring drink programs in America. Food & Health

