

At least 8 killed as anti-government protests sweep Kenya

TONY KARUMBA/AFP/GETTY IMAGES

Protesters flee police in downtown Nairobi during anti-government demonstrations across Kenya that rights and medical groups said left at least eight dead Wednesday. Demonstrators were marking the first anniversary of deadly protests, and officers responded Wednesday with bullets, batons, whips and tear gas, according to medics. Story, A8

In first big federal relocation, HUD will move to Virginia

This article is by Katie Shepherd, Laura Vozzella, Rachel Siegel, Teo Armus and Meagan Flynn

The Trump administration announced on Wednesday that the Department of Housing and Urban Development will be the first major federal agency to relocate its headquarters outside of D.C., part of a larger plan to restructure the federal government's real estate footprint.

It will go to Alexandria as part of plan to 'rightsize' agencies' D.C. footprint

HUD Secretary Scott Turner, Virginia Gov. Glenn Youngkin (R) and Michael Peters, commissioner of the General Services Administration's Public Buildings Service, said at a news conference that the agency will move 2,700 workers from a building in such a state of disrepair that the ceiling appears to be crumbling to a more modern building in the city of Alexandria. While it's just across the Potomac River from D.C., the move could help Youngkin and his Republican allies portray Trump's actions as an economic boon to Virginia in advance of the swing state's race for governor this year and the 2026 congressional races. "At every turn, this commonwealth has proven that we are strong, we are dynamic and we are winning," Youngkin said, delivering a campaign-style speech at the news conference, where he was later presented with a "HUD ♥ Virginia" sign. But some prominent Virginia economists expect that Trump's broader actions to slash

SEE HEADQUARTERS ON A6

Trump embraces NATO over vows to surge spending

SUMMIT TAILOR-MADE TO PLEASE PRESIDENT

Nations don't mention Ukraine, praise attacks on Iran

BY MICHAEL BIRNBAUM, NATALIE ALLISON AND ELLEN FRANCIS

THE HAGUE — President Donald Trump issued a full-throated endorsement of NATO and its defense mission after a summit of alliance leaders Wednesday, in his most forceful backing of a group he once threatened to abandon. "These people really love their countries," Trump told reporters. "It's not a rip-off, and we're here to help them." The message came as NATO's 32 nations agreed to more than double their defense spending targets, long a sore spot with Trump but now a selling point for his involvement in transatlantic security. It was an about-face from the president's first term, when he regularly shared his reluctance to defend Europe, and even from the first months of this year, when he leaned heavily into rebooting relations with Russian President Vladimir Putin and unsettled Europeans with threats toward Ukraine. Trump's turnaround Wednesday was the payoff of a major effort by other NATO members to flatter him. Trump stayed overnight in a royal palace, received fawning

SEE NATO ON A14

Media leaks: White House will limit intelligence given to Congress. A10

Administration prepares to test budget law, officials say

BY JEFF STEIN, HANNAH NATANSON, CAROLYN Y. JOHNSON AND DAN DIAMOND

The Trump administration is preparing to test a 1974 budget law by refusing to spend congressionally mandated funds, senior federal officials say — an escalation that could change the balance of power between Congress and the White House. In both internal communications and interviews, more than two dozen current and former employees across multiple agencies said the administration appears to be readying to push the

Amid aim to rebalance spending authority, internal dissent simmers boundaries of the law meant to prevent the president from unilaterally overturning spending decisions made by Congress. Key White House aides have long argued that the law is an unconstitutional limit on presidential power and suggested that they will seek court rulings to overturn it, which could allow

SEE SPENDING ON A16

Remade vaccine panel will review kids' shot schedule

BY LENA H. SUN, LAUREN WEBER AND RACHEL ROUBEIN

ATLANTA — The newly formed vaccine advisory committee handpicked by Health and Human Services Secretary Robert F. Kennedy Jr. announced that it would examine the cumulative effect of the childhood vaccine schedule and reevaluate hepatitis B immunization recommendations — moves that could shift long-standing practices of how and when children are immunized in the United States. Kennedy, who previously founded an anti-vaccine group, has long called for an investigation into the number of shots children receive and criticized hepatitis B vaccines. Medical experts say Kennedy has falsely linked an increase in vaccines to a rise of chronic disease, but they note that more vaccines are available now to combat diseases and that his link has no basis in evidence. Medical experts and the federal government recommend the hepatitis B vaccine, saying it prevents the liver disease, which can be passed along at birth. The announcement of the review of immunization schedules came during a meeting of the Advisory Committee on Immunization Practices, which makes recommendations to the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention on which vaccines should be recommended and for whom, and whether they will be covered by health insurance. This month Kennedy abruptly fired every one of the ACIP's 17 members and replaced them two days later with eight handpicked members, including some voices

SEE VACCINATION ON A4

Vaccinations stall: Millions of children are at risk, study says. A9

RICKY CARIOTI/THE WASHINGTON POST

Therapists at Hampshire Memorial Hospital in Romney, West Virginia, assist a patient this month. Like every rural hospital in the state, Hampshire Memorial relies deeply on Medicaid.

GOP bill may sever lifeline for red states

Medicaid cuts imperil program that helps rural hospitals stay afloat

BY YASMEEN ABUTALEB

ROMNEY, W.VA. — Hampshire Memorial Hospital is nestled deep in the Appalachian Mountains, past more than 20 miles of winding mountain roads dotted with lush trees and ridges. It is the only hospital for a county that spans 645 square miles and, for many of its 24,000 residents, is the sole option for health care ranging from routine ailments to life-threatening emergencies. Like every rural hospital in West Virginia, Hampshire Memorial relies deeply on Medicaid, the government health insurance program for the poor that covers about one-third of residents in this deep-red state. But its ability to continue treating Hampshire County — among the poorer and sicker counties in the country — has been thrown into doubt by President Donald Trump's sprawling tax and spending package that he has said he wants on his desk by July 4. The proposal, which passed the House last month, proposes codifying trillions of dollars in tax cuts from Trump's first term

SEE MEDICAID ON A20

In Maryland: State workers told to brace for freeze, buyouts. B13

Mamdani's rise hands party a strategy — and promises strife

BY TOLUSE OLORUNNIPA

The stunning ascendance of a 33-year-old democratic socialist in the race for New York mayor has sent shock waves through a party still reeling from President Donald Trump's election — sparking fresh clashes between moderates and liberals about Democrats' best path back to national relevance. Zohran Mamdani, a state assemblyman who appears poised to claim the Democratic nomination in the mayoral contest, has instantly emerged as a national figure for a struggling party, though his rise has further inflamed a brewing internal battle over the party's future. Mamdani's apparent triumph over a better-known and better-funded contender, former New York governor Andrew M. Cuomo, signified a major victory for liberal activists, and, for some, the latest warning sign that the party's establishment old guard is particularly weak in the eyes of everyday voters. But others are taking a different warning from Tuesday's results — rushing to publicly reject the "socialist" label Mamdani has embraced. Those moderates are cautioning that a party that increasingly seems confined to coastal big cities should not be so quick to adopt ideas and rhetoric that can

SEE MAMDANI ON A5

IN THE NEWS

Kilmar Abrego García Two federal judges balked at Justice Department claims that it would be unable to stop his deportation should he be released from custody. A3
Housing policy reinstated A Virginia Court of Appeals panel ruled that Arlington County can again eliminate single-family-only zoning. B13

THE NATION Trump nominee Emil Bove defended himself against whistleblower allegations. A2
Census data shows that immigration is driving population growth in a graying U.S. A6

THE WORLD The opulent wedding of Jeff Bezos in Venice has become a lightning rod for criticism. A9
Intense summer heat is arriving earlier and lasting longer due to climate change. A10

THE ECONOMY Nippon Steel's acquisition of U.S. Steel required an unusually hands-on approach and months of lobbying. A15
Two former heavyweights in job recruitment that in 2024 merged into Career-Builder + Monster declared bankruptcy. A20

STYLE Kari Lake defended the dismantling of Voice of America before a House committee. B1
SPORTS The Wizards took Tre Johnson with the No. 6 pick of the NBA draft. Duke star Cooper Flagg was the first pick by the Dallas Mavericks. B7

THE REGION All 15 U.S. district court judges in Maryland are being sued by the Justice Department over a deportation order. B13
LOCAL LIVING Interested in creating a sweet-smelling outdoor refuge? More than a dozen scented plants beckon.

BUSINESS NEWS.....	A15
COMICS.....	B4
OBITUARIES.....	B16
OPINION PAGES.....	A17
TELEVISION.....	B6
WORLD NEWS.....	A8

CONTENT © 2025
The Washington Post
Year 148, No. 54259

