major campaign with ex-Special Forces commanders and senior MPs to protect the soldiers who bravely defended this country.

We are demanding that ministers

U-turn on their bid to repeal the Tories' Legacy Act, which shielded Northern Ireland veterans from historical 'witch hunts', or else produce a proper alternative.

It comes as former SAS soldiers face possible murder charges after a judge in Northern Ireland ruled that the shooting of four IRA terrorists in 1992 was not justified. Those behind the campaign have warned of a dire threat to national security if this process is permitted to continue.

One ex-SAS commanding officer said ministers had to wake up to the need to protect serving and retired
