Boston Sunday Globe

Serving our community since 1872

OCTOBER 11, 2026

On second thought, yes, Red Line please

In Arlington, a push to overturn earlier rejection

By Spencer Buell
GLOBE STAFF

ARLINGTON — Where did it all go off the tracks?

In the late 1970s, what was then a blue-collar suburb saw plans to extend the MBTA Red Line under its streets, providing an easy link to Cambridge, Somerville, and Boston.

The federal government had money to spend, and the massive effort to extend the subway from Harvard Square to Alewife was just around the next curve.

Then Arlington did something that, with 50 years of hindsight, seems unthinkable to many of its modern-day residents. The town said no. The stops were never built. The Red Line ends at Alewife.

Now, at a time when most cities around here would kill for a T stop to escape their traffic woes, many of the town's residents want a re-do, as unlikely as that

ARLINGTON, Page A12

> 'The people who were in Arlington in 1978 don't have a right to set our priorities. The town has changed. People changed. Their needs have changed.'
>
> PAUL SCHLICHTMAN, School Committee and Town Meeting member who is a leader of an advocacy group called Extend the Red Line

Priest's case echoes church's shameful past

Bishop planned to move accused to another parish before charges

By Mike Damiano
GLOBE STAFF

EAST BROOKFIELD — In 2021, a young parishioner in the rural middle of the state told a visiting priest that the Rev. Alan J. Martineau had cultivated a special relationship with her and then inappropriately touched her. Beginning in 2019, the girl said, Martineau repeatedly hugged, kissed, and touched her. Martineau also exchanged tens of thousands of text messages with the girl, investigators later found.

Notified multiple times, the bishop of the diocese, Robert Joseph McManus of Worcester, sought to do what church leaders before him had done so often: transfer Martineau to another parish where he would receive the "tutelage" of an older priest.

But before that transfer occurred, a social worker with the diocese decided the allegations had become so serious that they must be reported to the state, so she called the Department of Children and Families.

Ultimately, instead of moving to another parish, Martineau would become the lone

DIOCESE, Page A16

In Maine, a wellspring of suspicion

Neighbors fear Poland Spring contributes to low-water conditions

GRETA RYBUS FOR THE BOSTON GLOBE

Cullen Ryan used his canoe paddle to show how shallow the water has become in Long Pond in Denmark, Maine.

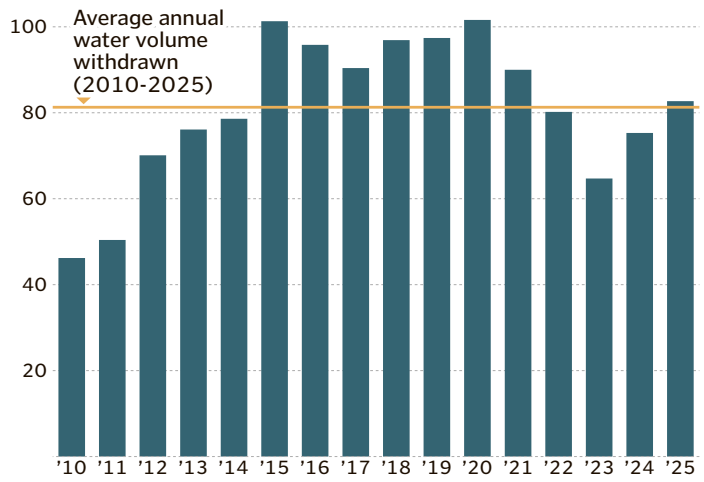

By Kate Selig
GLOBE STAFF

DENMARK, Maine — For some residents of this quiet corner of southwestern Maine, there is something a little too cruelly on the nose about the old adage from Coleridge: "Water, water, everywhere, nor any drop to drink."

This rural one-stoplight town, a source of Poland Spring's famed water, is struggling to understand why some private wells are running dry and a cherished pond popular with vacationers is shrinking, while a quarter-mile away the beverage company is pumping thousands of gallons of water a day amid a punishing drought.

"It doesn't make sense to me to extract millions of gallons of water during a drought," said Cullen Ryan, who built a home on the pond by hand nearly three decades ago.

POLAND SPRING, Page A13

Total water volume withdrawn by Poland Spring in Denmark, Maine

Poland Spring pumped 82.7 million gallons of water from two boreholes near Long Pond in Denmark, Maine, in 2025, slightly more than the average annual volume of water pumped from the locations since 2010.

SOURCE: Town of Denmark. Figures in millions of gallons

JOHN HANCOCK/GLOBE STAFF

END OF NORMALCY

Trump's greatest ode yet to himself

Library project has a built-in moneymaker

By Jim Puzzanghera
GLOBE STAFF

WASHINGTON — Of all the vanity projects President Trump has pursued in his second term — the White House ballroom, the triumphal arch, the Kennedy Center, and Lincoln Memorial Reflecting Pool — there is one that's received much less attention but would potentially tower over them all as the most enduring and potentially most lucrative for him.

It would be a thousand miles away from the nation's capital, on what is now a parking lot in downtown Miami. The structure would be large enough to house a jumbo jet in its lobby and so tall as to be, in the words of Eric Trump, "visible for miles into the Atlantic."

And, of course, it would be topped by giant illuminated letters spelling out "TRUMP."

The Donald J. Trump Presidential Library would raise the trend of presidents erecting increasingly more elaborate monuments to themselves to new heights. But it also appears headed toward something unprecedented in the annals of American presidential libraries, but completely on form for Trump: a major money-making operation.

The library reportedly would be housed on the lower levels of a 47-story skyscraper (for the nation's 47th president) that Trump has said would mostly be a hotel or office space. The shiny new piece of Trump-branded real estate would be owned by a

TRUMP, Page A15

VOL. 310, NO. 103
*
Suggested retail price
$6.00
0 947726 1 40717

I will leaf you to it

Sunday: Sunny, then rain tonight. High: 61-66. Low: 52-57.

Monday: Rainy, then clearing. High: 66-71. Low: 51-56.

Complete report, A24.

How to manage the work and close quarters while taking a narrowboat through the UK's canals. N11.

Writer John Sedgwick has died. His memoir chronicled the mental health struggles of relatives recent and ancient. B1.

The Globe Magazine is not publishing today. The puzzles are on B8.

Let the giving begin

Toys are like tools for children, and Globe Santa has been providing those tools for over seven decades. Santa's gifts are only possible because of your generosity. B1.

Great Rate.
Guaranteed Returns.

4.50% APY*
15-MONTH CD

Maximum balance of $250,000 per primary account owner.

Open online today!

INSTITUTION FOR SAVINGS
BUILDING STRONGER COMMUNITIES TOGETHER SINCE 1820.
978-462-3106 • institutionforsavings.com

*Annual Percentage Yield (APY) is effective 10/8/26. Term deposit rates and APYs are fixed for the duration of the term. Minimum balance to open an account and obtain the Annual Percentage Yield shown is $500. Maximum deposit per primary account owner is $250,000 plus interest paid.A penalty will be imposed for early withdrawal. Account is available for personal and business accounts. Rates are subject to change. Deposits insured in full. Member FDIC Member DIF