As Trump threatens trade war with EU – but hints at sparing UK – Starmer begs Brussels for closer ties at palace banquet

By Jason Groves and David Churchill in Brussels

KEIR Starmer last night vowed to continue trying to unpick Brexit – despite warnings Britain will be dragged into a damaging trade war with the United States.

In a dramatic move which caused turmoil on global markets yesterday, Donald Trump threatened heavy trade tariffs against the EU, describing the bloc's conduct as 'an atrocity'. But he suggested the UK could be spared because of Brexit.

Senior Tories urged the Prime Minister to abandon his 'reset' with Brussels and focus on securing a new trade deal with the US.

But speaking ahead of a dinner with EU leaders last night,
