Doctor's newly revealed memo casts doubt on court claim nurse was caught 'red-handed'

BOMBSHELL EMAIL THAT COULD FREE LUCY LETBY

EXCLUSIVE

By Glen Owen

POLITICAL EDITOR

AN explosive email appears to contradict prosecution claims that Lucy Letby was caught 'red-handed' with a baby who subsequently died.

The memo, revealed yesterday, is a significant boost to the nurse's legal fight to overturn her convictions.

Dr Ravi Jayaram was the only medical witness at Letby's two trials who was able to point to behaviour directly linking her to babies' deaths, testifying that she was standing over Baby K's cot as the girl was deteriorating – and that she did not call for help.

But, extraordinarily, in an email sent to his colleagues at the Countess of Chester

MPs seize back British Steel from Chinese on historic day

By Anna Mikhailova

DEPUTY POLITICAL EDITOR

DOWNING Street wrestled control of the Scunthorpe steel plant from the Chinese last night after a day of high drama in the Commons.

The Steel Industry (Special Measures) Bill passed after MPs and peers were ordered back from holiday to give the Government emergency powers to take over operations from British Steel's Chinese owners Jingye.

Officials were already at the plant's gates, ready to take control of the blast furnaces as the Bill cleared both Houses unopposed and King Charles gave it Royal Assent.

The intervention came amid fears the plant could shut within days, putting thousands of jobs at risk and ending vital virgin steel production in the UK.

An attempt by Jingye bosses to enter the premises just hours before the legislation passed was foiled after police forced them to leave.

While the new law stopped short of nationalisation, Business Secretary Jonathan Reynolds said full state ownership 'remains on the table' and may well be the 'likely option' for British Steel.

However, Reform UK's deputy leader Richard Tice said last night that the measures by Parliament did not go far enough and called on Mr Reynolds to 'show your cojones' and nationalise British Steel.
