Agents kill Minneapolis man

Church community sustains family through ICE detention

Before choir practice on a Saturday morning, Marina Lopez rushed her three children to get ready. They were running late.

“Andenles, ya apaguen la tele y ponganse la chamarra. Hurry, turn off the TV, put on your jacket,” she told them.

Her youngest daughter, Sofia, ran toward her mother so that she could tie her hair into a braid. Lopez smiled. She had dreamed of mornings like this. There was a time she worried she would never be able to braid her daughter's long, brown hair again. Or even see her again.

Seven months earlier, Lopez had been detained after receiving a sudden notice from immigration authorities summoning her to an appointment in Chicago's South Loop. The mother had been in the United States more than 10 years under supervision as she sought asylum. Long enough to believe there was

City and state officials demand Trump end deadly crackdown

MINNEAPOLIS — Federal immigration agents shot and killed a 37-year-old Minneapolis resident Saturday morning, the city's police chief said.

The shooting prompted a clash between authorities and hundreds of protesters, and Minnesota officials renewed demands that the Trump administration end its immigration crackdown, which has resulted in two deaths.

Federal officials said on social media that an agent had fired on a man with a handgun after an “armed struggle.”

In a bystander video obtained by The Associated Press, protesters can be heard blowing whistles and shouting profanities at agents on Nicollet Avenue.

The video shows an officer shoving a person who is wearing a brown jacket, skirt and black tights and carrying a water bottle. That person

OBAMA CENTER Foundation promotes short-term rentals

Residents worry about gentrification, housing shortages

By A.D. Quig
Chicago Tribune

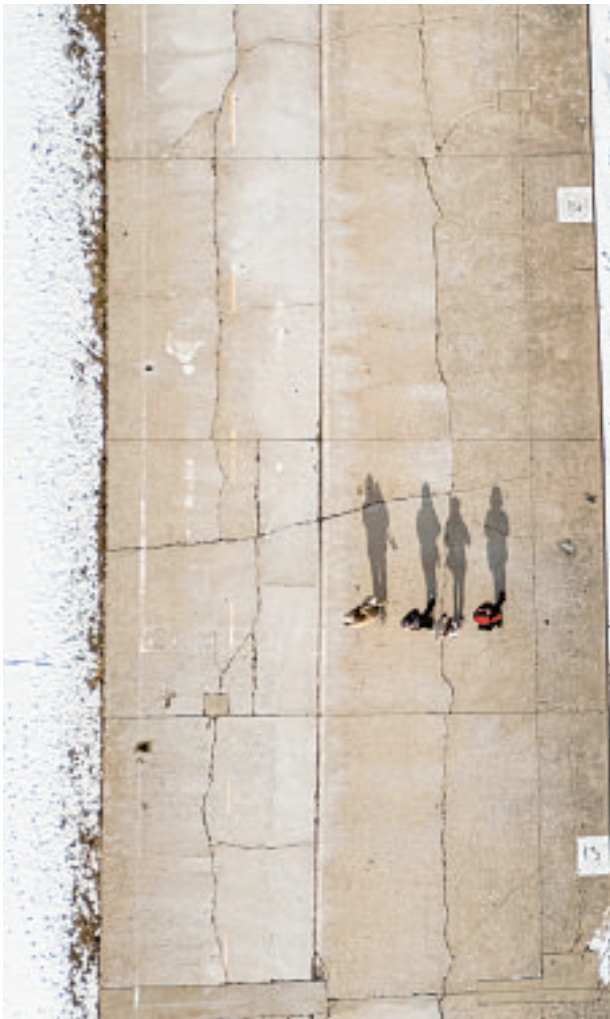

As former President Barack Obama's name-sake foundation prepares to roll out the welcome mat to huge crowds of tourists flocking to the South Side when the Obama Presidential Center opens its doors in a few months, it is promoting Airbnb, a company with close ties to the Obama family that has faced international protests for its impact on local rents and housing supply.

“(We’re) committed to making sure that South Side residents and entrepreneurs are ready to take full advantage of this influx of new visitors,” Valerie Jarrett, CEO of the Obama Foundation, said in a December release announcing a series of community tourism prep sessions.

But for residents and organizers who have fretted about gentrification in Woodlawn and South Shore and pressed for housing protections since Obama announced Jackson Park as the site of his museum in 2016, the Obama organization pitching more short-term rentals as a good way to deal with tourism adds to their conviction that the center will exacerbate housing shortages and raise rents.

Ald. Desmond Yancy, 5th, worries about a future in which large numbers of short-term rentals become part of the landscape near the Obama center. He said he's already seen outside investors snap up units in

No longer on thin ice

On a brisk January day with wind chills plunging to minus 25 degrees, Paul “Blade” Bloedorn stood out on nearly 2 feet of ice on Lake Michigan's Little Bay de Noc.

Last weekend, more than 400 shacks speckled the frozen bay, Bloedorn recalled, as ice anglers flocked to the Upper Peninsula to take advantage of perfect ice conditions.

“It's truly the best time to fish the Noc,” Bloedorn wrote in a blogpost to his 10,000 Facebook followers. “Enjoy this ideal ice season to its fullest. It's the best we've had in years.”

As owner of Blade's Bait and Tackle, a popular fishing outfitter in Gladstone, Michigan, Bloedorn has become a trusted source on Lake Michigan's daily ice conditions for the Upper Peninsula's ice anglers — many of whom travel hours to fish the bay.

“Ice changes every day, and as we go south, it changes every minute,” Bloedorn said. “If I weren't out there every day, I wouldn't know what I'm talking about.”

This winter, Bloedorn and Great Lakes experts say lake conditions are shaping up well for ice fishing, a welcome shift for coastal communities that have endured recent winters with little ice.

Thicker ice is bringing some relief to Bloedorn and others whose livelihoods
