Dubai Future Research Hub to attract 30,000 specialists

NAD ZABEEL TO ADVANCE RESEARCH IN VITAL SECTORS SHAPING HUMAN FUTURE

■ The Nad Zabeel project was launched in the presence of Sheikh Mohammed by Sheikh Hamdan.

His Highness Sheikh Mohammed Bin Rashid Al Maktoum, Vice-President and Prime Minister of the UAE and Ruler of Dubai, yesterday announced the launch of the Dubai Future Research Hub, named Nad Zabeel, which aims to attract 30,000 researchers and specialists to help develop vital sectors shaping the future of human life.

In a post on his X account, Sheikh Mohammed emphasised that the future must be actively shaped rather than passively awaited, stressing that nations face challenges not because of the rapid pace of change, but because they are slow to prepare for it.

"Life has taught me that the future is not something we wait for, but something we create. The challenges facing nations are not caused by the rapid pace of future developments, but by the slow pace of preparing for and thinking about them," Sheikh Mohammed said.

Strategic ecosystem

"Today, we are launching the Dubai Future Research Hub, which we have named 'Nad Zabeel'. Nad Zabeel will complete our strategic ecosystem for institutionalising the creation of the future," Sheikh Mohammed added.

"It will join the Dubai Future Foundation, the Museum of the Future, the Dubai Future Academy and other institutions to collectively create the world's best environment for anticipating, preparing for and shaping the future."

The project was launched by Sheikh Hamdan Bin Mohammed Bin Rashid Al Maktoum, Crown Prince of Dubai, Deputy Prime Minister and Minister of Defence of the UAE, and Chairman of the Board of Trustees of Dubai Future Foundation.

Sheikh Hamdan said: "Shaping the future in Dubai is not a slogan or a temporary project, but an integrated institutional system established by His Highness Sheikh Mohammed Bin Rashid Al Maktoum that we continue to develop and build upon. Our goal is to keep Dubai ahead in anticipating global transformations, developing solutions to future challenges, attracting the world's leading minds and expertise, and reinforcing its position as a global centre for knowledge creation and shaping the future."

Major centre

Nad Zabeel will become a major centre for designing and developing the future of vital sectors central to human life, including artificial intelligence, robotics, advanced technology, urban technologies, and health and environmental technologies.

Located in Zabeel Park, Nad Zabeel will house laboratories, scientific and research centres, and creative and innovation incubators. It will bring together leading scientists, researchers, engineers, innovators and future pioneers, alongside specialised talent and expertise from the UAE, the region and around the world.

Construction and associated operations are expected to be completed within five years under the supervision of Dubai Future Foundation.

UAE hopes for peace, but 'braced for worst'

Not in the interest of the region to go through another round: Gargash

The UAE has repeatedly called for restraint, dialogue and adherence to international law as essential steps towards resolving regional crises through peaceful means.

The UAE is hoping for a diplomatic breakthrough between the United States and Iran but remains "braced for the worst" amid threats of renewed fighting in the Middle East, a senior UAE official warned yesterday.

Anwar Gargash, Diplomatic Adviser to the UAE President, said another round of conflict would not serve the region's interests, even as governments remained alert to the possibility of further military escalation.

"We're hoping that there is a diplomatic breakthrough," Gargash said at a conference in Bahrain, according to AFP.

"It is not in the interest of the region to go through another round... But I think we're also, as we've shown before, braced for the worst."

Renewed concerns

His remarks at the 22nd IISS Manama Dialogue came amid renewed concerns over the US-Iran confrontation and the possibility that another round of hostilities could threaten regional stability.

The UAE has repeatedly called for restraint, dialogue and adherence to international law as essential steps towards resolving regional crises through peaceful means.

In a statement last week, the Ministry of Foreign Affairs reaffirmed the country's commitment to diplomatic solutions, urging intensified regional and international efforts to prevent further escalation.

At the same conference, Gulf Cooperation Council (GCC) Secretary-General Jasem Mohamed Al Budaiwi said Gulf countries remained willing to negotiate with Tehran but stressed that diplomatic engagement required a reciprocal response.

"The GCC states have always called for dialogue and negotiation to resolve any issue in the region, and they still do," Al Budaiwi said. "But diplomacy needs partners, partners who respond in kind."

He said the six-member bloc maintained communication channels with Iran while continuing to work with international partners to safeguard regional security.

Saudi Vice Foreign Minister Waleed Elkhereiji warned that threats to international navigation through the Strait of Hormuz, the Red Sea and Bab Al Mandab required coordinated international action. He condemned renewed Houthi attacks on Saudi Arabia and threats to commercial shipping.

Dubai will allow visitors to apply for tourist visas through its official tourism website, Visit Dubai, from this month, as part of two new initiatives announced by Sheikh Hamdan Bin Mohammed Bin Rashid Al Maktoum, Crown Prince of Dubai, Deputy Prime Minister and Minister of Defence of the UAE, and Chairman of The Executive Council of Dubai.

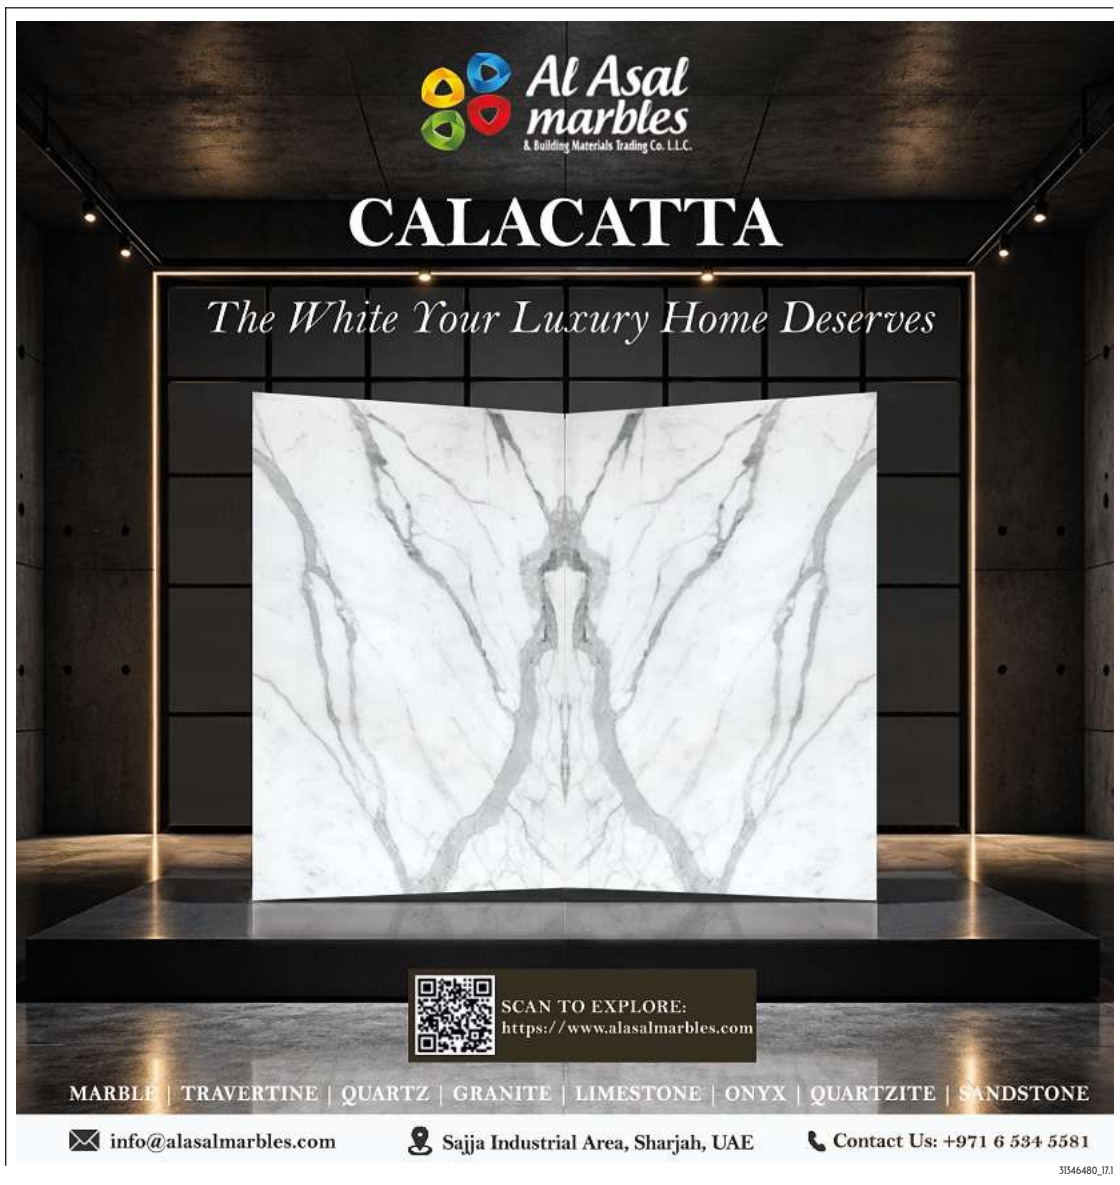

The changes will also include the launch of Dubai Access Club, an invitation-only membership programme offering exclusive benefits and experiences to repeat visitors.

New visa service

Under the new visa service, travellers will be able to apply for single-entry and multiple-entry tourist visas through Visit Dubai. The General Directorate of Identity and Foreigners Affairs – Dubai (GDRFA Dubai) will continue to assess applications and issue visas. The two initiatives are being developed by GDRFA Dubai, the Dubai Department of Economy and Tourism (DET) and Digital Dubai under the Shared Digital Channels Initiative, which brings government services together through unified digital platforms.

The Dubai Access Club will be open to invited members and offer exclusive experiences, services and benefits designed to encourage repeat visits.

Sheikh Hamdan said the initiatives were intended to improve different stages of the visitor journey and support Dubai's ambition to rank among the world's top three destinations for business and leisure under the Dubai Economic Agenda, D33.
