

THE WALL STREET JOURNAL.

DOW JONES | News Corp

FRIDAY, SEPTEMBER 11, 2026 ~ VOL. CCLXXXVIII NO. 61

WSJ.com

★★★★ $5.00

DJIA 52064.10 ▼ 316.56 0.60% NASDAQ 26081.72 ▼ 0.7% STOXX 600 635.97 ▼ 0.7% 10-YR. TREAS. (Reopening) yield 4.943% OIL $102.48 ▲ $6.43 GOLD $4,364.50 ▼ $51.50 EURO $1.1612 YEN 154.43

What's News

Business & Finance

- ◆ Yields on U.S. Treasuries surged anew, lifted in part by a new jump in oil prices, while among stock indexes the S&P 500 and Dow each fell 0.6% and the Nasdaq shed 0.7%. A1
- ◆ The European Central Bank raised interest rates for the second time this year and warned that inflation pressures aren't going away soon. A8
- ◆ Shares of Oracle rose more than 7% after the company posted sharply higher profit and revenue for its latest quarter, with sales from its cloud infrastructure business more than doubling. B1
- ◆ Chinese AI companies tried to clone U.S. models by funneling real Chinese user queries to them via a network of intermediate platforms, Anthropic said. B1
- ◆ Positron, a chip startup focused on designing hardware that helps AI models run more quickly, said it raised $875 million at a valuation of $5 billion. B4
- ◆ Anthropic gave the European Union's cybersecurity authority access to its powerful Mythos artificial-intelligence model after months of negotiations with the bloc. B4
- ◆ Macy's raised its full-year outlook, a move executives said was partly driven by higher prices on its products, including bringing in higher-end brands. B3
- ◆ Chemours, DuPont and Corteva settled with North Carolina and 11 communities that were excluded from a previous resolution over drinking-water toxins. B3
- ◆ Adobe said it hit one billion monthly active users and lifted its full-year guidance, as its profit and revenue rose in the third quarter. B2

Worldwide

- ◆ Dozens of lawmakers are touting new proposals to regulate artificial-intelligence models amid growing fears that the technology could destroy civilization. A1
- ◆ Iran resumed its production of ballistic missiles using stockpiled components and working in underground facilities, eroding what the U.S. and Israel have touted as a major achievement of the war. A1
- ◆ Iran-backed Houthi militants seized the Yemeni port city of Mokha, expanding their control near the Bab al-Mandeb chokepoint for energy exports through the Red Sea. A6
- ◆ The Supreme Court for a second time blocked Missouri from using a congressional map in the November midterm elections that the state GOP redrew to benefit Republicans. A4
- ◆ The Pentagon is in talks to lend roughly $5 billion to AI cloud-computing startup Fluidstack, adding the U.S. military to the growing list of financiers of artificial-intelligence infrastructure. A3
- ◆ California Gov. Gavin Newsom signed a law prohibiting social-media platforms from showing "addictive features" to users younger than 16. A3
- ◆ The crash in Miami of an Amazon cargo jet has shined a light on the carrier operating the flight—21 Air—and its owner, Jim Crane. A3
- ◆ European governments, now the main donors to Ukraine's defense against Russia, are struggling to meet Kyiv's mounting costs. A8
- ◆ Two children were among the dead after Israel carried out a strike in the northern Gaza community of Beit Lahiya, said the hospital where the bodies were taken. A8

CONTENTS
Arts in Review A11-12	Markets Digest..... B7
Business & Finance B2-4	Money & Investing B10
Crossword..... A12	Opinion..... A13-15
From Page One. A10	Sports..... A16
Heard on Street. B10	Technology..... B4
Mansion..... M1-10	U.S. News..... A2-4
	World News..... A6,8

Normans Conquer London Again

TOBY MEVILL/REUTERS

NARRATIVE THREAD: Visitors throng the nearly 1,000-year-old Bayeux Tapestry on Thursday at the British Museum. The 230-foot-long panel, on loan from France, recounts events leading up to the Norman conquest of England in 1066. More than a million visitors are expected by the time the exhibition closes next summer, and the artwork returns to Bayeux, France.

Iran Resumes Missile Program Despite Attacks on Production

Intelligence findings say Tehran is using stockpiled parts in underground spaces

Iran has resumed its production of ballistic missiles using stockpiled components and working in underground facilities, officials from the U.S. and Middle East familiar with the matter said, eroding what the U.S. and Israel have touted as a major achievement of the war. Despite heavy attacks on its missile sites and industrial facilities, Iran has been busy assembling liquid-propellant missiles, which have to be fueled just before launch, as well as solid-propellant missiles, which can be stored ready to fire, some of the officials said.

Intelligence points to activity at underground sites including the Khojir missile facility in southeastern Iran, those officials said. Iran is also attempting to build new underground assembly points to avoid getting struck again, they said.

So far, Iran is mainly assembling the new missiles from existing components in

By Anat Peled, Summer Said and Michael R. Gordon

more limited quantities than before the war, the U.S. and regional officials said. The U.S. and Israel damaged a number of industrial facilities needed to produce missile components and missiles themselves, and the naval blockade has complicated imports of parts and ingredients for solid fuel.

The renewed production underscores the difficulty of fully dismantling Tehran's missile program, a goal of the war the U.S. and Israel launched on Feb. 28. It also extends Iran's ability to hold on in the war of attrition that pits its supplies of the weapons against shrinking U.S. and regional stockpiles of missile interceptors.

"When there are no bombings of the facilities, you can replace damaged infrastructure, and you can buy new components from other countries and store them in the fa-

Please turn to page A6

◆ Iran-backed Houthis seize Yemeni port..... A6

Home Sales Tumble

Home sales in August fell to their lowest level in more than a year, after rising mortgage rates dealt another blow to a hobbled housing market. Sales of existing homes declined 2% in August over the previous month to a seasonally adjusted annual rate of 3.98 million. A2

Bond Yield Nears 5% as Selloff Shows No Sign of Diminishing

By Sam Goldfarb and Vicky Ge Huang

A monthslong selloff in government bonds is skidding into dangerous ground, pushing borrowing costs toward levels that some fear will finally damage the stock market and the economy.

Yields on U.S. Treasuries, which rise when bond prices fall, surged anew on Thursday, lifted by a new jump in oil prices, a firm wholesale inflation report and President Trump's promise to send $5,000 checks to Americans if Republicans keep control of Congress—a pledge that would add more than $1 trillion to the federal deficit.

Bond yields have been climbing since late June, breezing past Treasury Secretary Scott Bessent's efforts to stem the rise through increased government buybacks of its own long-term debt. Along the way, the bond markets have crossed milestones unseen in months and even years. The yield on the 30-year Treasury bond has already reached 19-year highs.

Now, though, all eyes are on the ultimate benchmark.

Mortgages, student loans, corporate bonds and interest rates on all forms of debt are linked closely to the yield on the U.S.'s 10-year Treasury note, which is on the brink of 5% for just the second time since the 2008-09 financial crisis. "Increases in Treasury yields," said Jay Hatfield, CEO

Please turn to page A2

◆ Heard on the Street: The message for stocks..... B10

Aritzia's Sales Secret: Looking the Part

By Suzanne Kapner

Walk into a retailer these days and it is often hard to find help. Not at Aritzia. The minute you glance at a blazer, blouse or sweatshirt, a saleswoman is at your elbow, asking if she can find your size or suggest a pair of pants to match.

These saleswomen don't just restock shelves or work the register. They help shoppers put outfits together. And they aren't shy about sharing their opinions, whether something looks great or misses the mark. Aritzia calls them style advisers.

To make the grade, Aritzia's style advisers don't have much margin for error. They have lofty sales goals, former employees said, while maintaining the advisers have to be able to accentuate the brand's look.

"We chose that name intentionally," said Aritzia Chief Executive Jennifer Wong in an interview this year. She joined the company in 1987 as a part-time style adviser. "They're not a sales associate. They're

Please turn to page A2

Alaska Race Pits Dan Sullivan Against...Dan Sullivan

A retired teacher is a long shot for Senate, but he's got one thing working in his favor

By Jim Carlton

PETERSBURG, Alaska—Like a lot of retirees, Dan Sullivan talks of downsizing and spending more time somewhere warm. The 69-year-old also contemplates a new activity: becoming a U.S. senator, by booting out another Dan Sullivan who has held that job for 12 years.

"People would joke around and say 'I wish you were senator. Oh, there's the senator,'" Sullivan, a former elementary-school teacher, said in his workshop on the outskirts of this island fish-

Please turn to page A10

INSIDE

MANSION College athletes used to live in dorms. Now they're buying million-dollar homes. M1

Scam Victims Fight Government To Recover Money

After the U.S. seized $225 million in suspicious crypto, a legal battle ensued

By Dylan Tokar

In 2022, after Nivie Kaul lost more than $8 million in a cryptocurrency scam, she embarked on a quest to unmask the criminals and get the money back.

Kaul, who lives in California, has said in court filings that she gave up her work as a legal consultant and learned how to trace crypto across digital ledgers. When U.S. law enforcement said they couldn't help her, she filed a legal claim in Turkey, where she had tracked some of her money. That sparked a probe into what Turkish prosecutors have described as a professional money-laundering ring, a tributary to the vast shadow economy underpinning the global scam industry.

Few scam victims ever get their money back, but Kaul's dogged crusade appeared set to pay off. A Turkish court in 2023 ordered the seizure of a digital wallet holding more than $100 million, from which Kaul says her losses would have been repaid. But then a new obstacle arose.

Before Turkey could move to distribute the money, U.S. law enforcement took custody of the wallet sought by Kaul, along with other crypto holdings totaling $225 million, in an operation dubbed Big Tuna that aimed

Please turn to page A10