

Men behind New Year attacks were both US soldiers

SEE PAGES 4-7

Daily Mail

dailymail.co.uk

FRIDAY, JANUARY 3, 2025

£1.10 85p to subscribers

SCAN TO SUBSCRIBE
AND SAVE

Here's Meghan
on Netflix, back in the second division of celebrity making
soups and cakes
for her pals

JAN MOIR

PAGES
2-3 &
24-25

As poll finds 83% of us are worried about state of health service

EXCLUSIVE

By Shaun Wooller
Health Editor

NHS managers' salaries have soared by more than £1.1 billion, despite repeated failures to hit targets, the Mail can reveal.

While manager numbers in the health service in England have swelled by 10,000 in a decade, 1,150 fully qualified GPs have left in the same period.

And as the army of managers grows, hospitals and ambulances routinely fail to meet performance targets on waiting lists, cancer treatment and response times.

It comes as a damning survey revealed that 83 per cent of Britons have major concerns about the state of the health service and don't think Labour's plans will fix it.

Health Secretary Wes Streeting says failing hospitals will be named and shamed in league tables and NHS managers sacked if they fail to make improvements.

He told bosses there will be 'no more rewards for failure' as he set out measures to tackle poor performance. But an analysis

Turn to Page 2

PAY OF NHS MANAGERS SOARS £1.1BN