Ministers still won't come clean on secret Afghan airlifts

Seeking a new life: The Afghan passengers disembark the secret flight to Britain

MINISTERS were last night urged to 'come clean' over a government operation smuggling Afghans to Britain.

The highly secretive mission followed a military data leak that put 100,000 at risk of being killed by the Taliban. Now, after 23 months of being gagged by a draconian super-injunction, the Daily Mail can reveal how the projected £7 billion cost was signed off while taxpayers and MPs were kept in the dark.

But the revelation sparked another secrecy row last night as Defence
