

THE WALL STREET JOURNAL.

What's News

Business & Finance

- ◆ Facebook owner Meta Platforms and the FTC squared off in a trial that could shape the future of antitrust enforcement and force the tech giant to break itself up by selling Instagram and WhatsApp. A1
- ◆ U.S. stocks overcame a midday swoon to end higher after optimism about tariff exemptions spread to the car industry. The S&P 500 and Dow each rose 0.8% and the Nasdaq gained 0.6%. B9
- ◆ Netflix aims to achieve a $1 trillion market capitalization and double its revenue by 2030, ambitious goals that show its growing heft as the largest global streamer. B1
- ◆ Nvidia said it would start producing artificial-intelligence supercomputers manufactured entirely in the U.S. after the Trump administration said tariffs were coming for semiconductor imports. B1
- ◆ Pfizer halted development of its experimental weight-loss pill, as the booming obesity drug market remains out of the company's reach. B2
- ◆ VW's Audi and Porsche brands recalled thousands of vehicles in the U.S. due to software problems that in Audi's case could cause the instrument-panel display to fail. B3
- ◆ UnitedHealth demanded repayment of billions of dollars it lent to medical providers after a cyberattack on one of its units wreaked havoc on the U.S. health-care system last year. B3
- ◆ LVMH posted sales below analysts' forecasts for the first quarter as a slowdown pervading the luxury-goods industry lingers on. B3

World-Wide

- ◆ Trump's top advisers and President Nayib Bukele of El Salvador said they lack the authority to bring back to the U.S. a migrant deported in error to a Salvadoran maximum-security prison, raising the legal stakes days after the Supreme Court ordered the U.S. to facilitate his return. A1
- ◆ Harvard University said it would resist the Trump administration's demands to change its governance structure, and hours later the government announced a $2.26 billion freeze of Harvard's multiyear grants and contracts. A1
- ◆ The deadliest missile strike on Ukraine this year pushed up the civilian death toll from Russia's invasion and widened divisions between the U.S. and Kyiv's European allies over Trump's strategy for ending the war. A8
- ◆ Israeli troops took over about a third of the Gaza Strip in renewed military action, declaring security zones in the north and south while pushing out their populations as part of a strategy to put greater pressure on Hamas. A7
- ◆ The man accused of setting fire to the Pennsylvania governor's mansion was charged with terrorism, arson and attempted murder. A3
- ◆ The fatal helicopter crash in the Hudson River prompted new scrutiny of aerial tours that benefit from regulations that allow them to avoid more-rigorous safety standards. A3
- ◆ Germany's parliament plans to meet May 6 to elect Friedrich Merz as the next chancellor subject to the approval of a coalition pact. A9

CONTENTS	Markets Digest..... B6
Arts in Review..... A13	Opinion..... A15-17
Business News..... B3	Personal Journal A11-12
Crossword..... A13	Sports..... A14
From Page One..... A10	Technology..... B4
Heard on Street..... B10	U.S. News..... A2-4,6
Markets..... B9	World News..... A7-9

Six Women, One Spaceship, a 10-Minute Flight

STAR POWER: Jeff Bezos' Blue Origin launched a celebrity crew of women into space Monday on a 10-minute flight that blasted off from Texas. From left, Bezos, Kerianne Flynn, Katy Perry, Lauren Sánchez, Aisha Bowe, Gayle King, Amanda Nguyen and Blue Origin's Sarah Knights and Dave Limp. For video of the space flight, scan the code with the article on A4.

U.S., El Salvador Won't Budge On Mistakenly Deported Man

WASHINGTON—President Trump's top advisers and President Nayib Bukele of El Salvador said Monday they lack the authority to bring back to the

By Vera Bergengruen, Tarini Parti and Jess Bravin

U.S. a migrant deported in error to a Salvadoran maximum-security prison, raising the legal stakes days after the Supreme Court ordered the U.S. to facilitate his return.

The case of Kilmar Abrego Garcia—who lived with his family in Maryland and was deported in what the Trump administration acknowledged was an “administrative error”—has become a flashpoint in Trump's aggressive approach to mass deportation. “Of course, I'm not going to do it,” said Bukele when asked whether he would return Abrego Garcia during a Monday meeting with Trump in the Oval Office. “How can I smuggle a terrorist into the United States? I don't have the power to return him to the United States.” Bukele called the question preposterous. Bukele's megapardon is a cornerstone of Trump's deportation strategy. In the Oval Office, wearing a black T-shirt and no tie, Bukele said he was “very eager to help” the U.S. by continuing to take alleged gang members and other deportees into his prison system. “You have 350 million people to liberate,” he told Trump. “But to liberate 350 million people, you have to imprison some.” The 43-year-old, who mocks critics by calling himself the world's “coolest dictator,” is Trump's top ally in Latin America. In the same Oval Office meeting, Trump administration officials objected to a federal judge's ruling that the U.S. should facilitate the return of Abrego Garcia, once Please turn to page A4

◆ Noem makes herself the face of DHS..... A4

Harvard Defies President's Demands, Funds Hit

By DOUGLAS BELKIN AND SARA RANDAZZO

Harvard University said Monday it would resist the Trump administration's demands to change its governance structure over campus antisemitism concerns, saying the government is oversteering its authority. Hours later the government announced a $2.26 billion freeze of Harvard's multiyear grants and contracts.

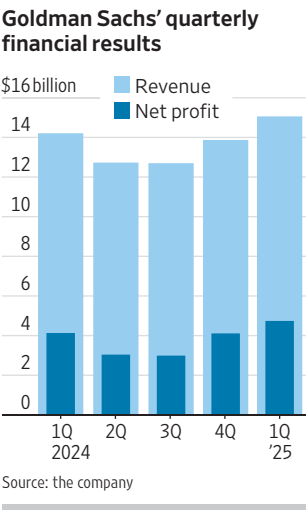

The exchange escalates the fight between the nation's wealthiest university and the federal government, which had already threatened to withhold nearly $9 billion in grants and contracts to the school and its affiliated hospitals. “The University will not surrender its independence or relinquish its constitutional rights,” Harvard President Alan Garber wrote in a letter to the school's community. The Trump administration said Monday that the school's response “reinforces the troubling entitlement mindset that is endemic in our nation's most prestigious universities and colleges—that federal investment does not come with the responsibility to uphold civil rights laws.”

Harvard's resistance to the administration's demands is the most significant pushback against the government since it began pressuring universities earlier this year. The Trump administration task force on antisemitism wrote to the university earlier this month asking it to take Please turn to page A2

◆ Law firm deals are work of Trump personal lawyer... A3

Trading Surge Lifts Goldman

Profit at Goldman and other banks for the quarter rose on a jump in trading revenue. B1

White-Collar Enforcement Recedes Under Trump

Justice Department backs away from some cases involving foreign bribery, money laundering and crypto markets

Gordon Coburn and Steven Schwartz were on the verge of going to trial on charges of scheming to pay bribes in India when President Trump issued an executive order that put enforcement of the Foreign Corrupt Practices Act on hold.

By Dave Michaels, Richard Vanderford and James Fanelli

It was a bolt of good luck for the former executives for Cognizant Technology Solutions, who had denied wrongdoing. The case had been dragging on for six years. Within two months, a new top prosecutor appointed by Trump dropped it. “There was a tremendous sense of relief,” said Lawrence Lustberg, a lawyer for Schwartz. The Trump administration is retreating from some types of white-collar law enforcement, including cases involving foreign bribery, public corruption, money laundering and crypto markets. In some cases, the administration is effectively redefining what business conduct constitutes a crime. Trump's executive order in February said Please turn to page A10

At China Hub, U.S. Orders Suddenly Stop

By YOKO KUBOTA

YIWU, China—At the world's biggest wholesale market in this eastern Chinese exporting hub, U.S. clients have disappeared. The Americans, or their representatives, used to show up to buy everything from Paw Patrol plushy dolls to Panama hats to toy sniper rifles. The famous Yiwu market here has 75,000 vendors across an area bigger than 1,000 U.S. football fields; no other place sells so much stuff, so cheaply, and for decades, much of it went to the voracious U.S. consumer. But with President Trump's latest tariffs on China, which surged to 145% last week, very little of the merchandise makes economic sense for U.S. buyers now. Yet during a visit by a Wall Street Journal reporter, vendors said they were confident they would survive, sustained by sales to other buyers, and a bit perplexed. Where would the Americans get all their sparkly keychains, baseball caps and coffee thermoses now? For some everyday items, such as socks, they said it might not be easy. “They could get things from other countries, but I don't know if the other countries can produce them as well as China,” said Zhou Li of socks maker Shen Li, referring to the U.S. Please turn to page A6

◆ Trade war deepens risk to U.S. brands in China..... B1

Roasted Duck, Plums and Cheese: All's Fair in China's Coffee War

Cafes are mixing some strange brews to stand out in a hypercompetitive market

By JON EMONT

A decade ago, Beijing filmmaker Guligo Jia drank Starbucks mochas to power through her workday. Today she downs Americanos doused in pineapple juice and lattes blended with French butter. Jia got swept up in China's coffee wars. Please turn to page A10

“My friend said it's fine, so I took a shot,” the 36-year-old said of her first pineapple Americano. “It tastes kind of juicy.” A nation of tea drinkers has caught the coffee bug, thrusting coffee shops into a cut-throat competition for new customers that goes way beyond slashing prices. They are Please turn to page A10

INSIDE

JASON GAY

After a hectic, near-disastrous collapse, a golfing giant finally seals the deal. A14

BUSINESS & FINANCE
Roundup weedkiller's end is near, says Bayer, citing mounting litigation costs. B1