

ON SUNDAY

MAY 18, 2025

£2.20 £1.90 to subscribers

SCAN TO SUBSCRIBE
AND SAVE

THE WELLNESS BOOK OF THE YEAR

How to eat, walk and sleep yourself young

By our Literary Editor who scientists say has a biological age of 20... at 61!

PAGES 30 - 32

NIGHT OF SHAME FOR EUROVISION

TV chiefs accused of editing out crowd's booing of Israeli singer who only survived Hamas's October 7 massacre by hiding under dead bodies at festival

ISRAEL'S terror survivor Yuval Raphael faced a barrage of hate at Eurovision last night as security teams swooped amid boos and jeers to prevent pro-Palestine protesters storming the stage.

Two activists shouting 'Free Palestine' were intercepted by security as they tried to reach the 24-year-old singer, who only survived the October 7 Nova music festival massacre by hiding under dead bodies for eight hours as Hamas gunmen rampaged.

A crew member was splattered by paint hurled in the melee as the world's biggest TV musical event, which attracted a huge crowd to the Swiss city of Basel, became a target for political protest.

A spokesman for the Swiss Broadcasting Corporation SRG SSR said: 'At the end of the Israeli performance a man and a woman tried to get over a barrier on to the stage. They were stopped. One of the two agitators threw paint and a crew member was hit. The man and the woman were handed over to the police.'

By Padraic Flanagan

Later, British protest group Youth Demand claimed three of its activists had been detained during Israel's performance. Yuval was the eventual runner-up to Austria.

BBC viewers may have struggled to detect the jeers. Commentator Graham Norton said Ms Raphael had received 'a slightly mixed reception' even as video emerged online showing her being booed and jeered by members of the standing audience.

Speculation grew online among viewers that the audio feed was edited by broadcasters, with producers tampering with the sound to drown out any booing – a

Turn to Page 5 >>

ROYAL EXCLUSIVE

Meghan's bust-up with Vogue editor who wouldn't put her on the cover

SEE PAGE 19