REEVES HIT BY BIGGEST JOBS SLUMP SINCE COVID

Embattled Chancellor heads to Davos summit amid fresh alarm over faltering economy and warnings from investors of 'debt death spiral'

EMBATTLED Rachel Reeves flew to Davos last night as Britain recorded its biggest jobs slump since Covid.

As the Chancellor headed for the Swiss resort for the annual gathering of the World Economic Forum, she also faced claims that the country was heading for a 'debt death spiral'.

And, in a third blow, the boss of one of Britain's leading banks said Ms Reeves had so far failed to get to grips with the economy.

It was the second time that the Chancellor has left the country in gathering economic gloom, following a visit to China earlier this month as a bond market sell-off
