BRITAIN has banished a 'close confidant' of Prince Andrew over claims he is a Chinese spy.

The supposed secret agent has been banned 'on security grounds' following an MI5 probe, bombshell court documents revealed last night.

The Duke of York now faces intense scrutiny over his alleged links with the businessman – who was told Andrew was in 'a desperate situation and will grab on to anything', a court heard.

He was at one point apparently so close to the prince that he was invited to his 60th birthday party in 2020.

An adviser to Andrew is said to have told the alleged spy: 'You sit at the top of a tree that many, many people would like to be on.'

He is also said to have told the man that the duke could smuggle people in and out of
