TRUMP'S TARIFFS THREATEN CRISIS FOR REEVES

Chancellor's headroom to be wiped out just one week after cuts to balance books

RACHEL Reeves will face a fresh crisis today as Donald Trump unleashes a fresh barrage of crippling tariffs.

The US President will tonight announce sweeping taxes on goods from around the world, which threaten to 'knock out' the Chancellor's latest financial plans only a week after she announced them.

Markets around the globe have plunged in anticipation of Mr Trump's so-called Liberation Day, and yesterday Britain's economy suffered a string of downgrades. White House aides have reportedly drafted plans for 'big-bang' tariffs of about 20 per cent on most of the £2.3trillion of goods imported annually to the US.

UK officials desperately tried to negotiate an economic deal with
