MISOGYNY THAT FUELLED KILLER

By Andrew Levy

A FORMER soldier's anger at being dumped was fuelled by the misogyny of online influencer Andrew Tate before he murdered his ex-partner along with her sister and mother.

Kyle Clifford, 26, watched videos of toxic Tate the day before he carried out the brutal triple murder, it can now be revealed.

Four women taking legal action against Tate called for the case to act as a 'wake-up call' for social media firms who host his output.

A jury took just 45 minutes yesterday to convict Clifford of raping his former girlfriend, Louise Hunt, before killing her. He will be sentenced to life in prison next week.

Clifford spent two weeks brooding about his humiliation over being dumped – despite secretly cheating on Louise with at least two other women – before turning up at the Hunt family home armed with a crossbow and knife.

He killed Louise's mother, Carol, 61 – wife of BBC horse-racing commentator John – with the ten-inch blade, then lay in wait for Louise, 25,
