

City reveals more details on driver in fatal crash

Investigator to review school bus company

By John Hilliard
GLOBE STAFF

The driver of the school bus that struck and killed a 5-year-old boy in Hyde Park was involved in two other driving incidents earlier in April and was pulled off the road for retraining less than two weeks before the deadly crash. Those new details, released by city officials Friday, add to the troubling disclosures about the driver, Jean Charles, who, just minutes before his bus hit the kindergarten student, struck two parked cars in Mattapan and left the scene.

► Boston Public Schools adds new safety measures for buses. B1.

Charles had also been driving school buses with an expired state-required credential since December 2024, officials said. The new disclosures were included in an announcement that Boston is hiring a former federal prosecutor to conduct an independent investigation of Transdev, the French transit company that has provided school bus services to the city since 2013. On April 28, Lens Arthur Joseph, a student at UP Academy Dorchester, and his 11-year-old cousin were dropped off by their school bus on Washington Street in Hyde Park that afternoon, and moments later, Lens was struck by the same bus, the Globe has reported. Matthew Fogelman, an attorney represent-

BPS, Page A10

Trump again wields threat of new tariffs

EU and Apple targeted; markets turn downward

By Ana Swanson, Jeanna Smialek, and Adam Satariano
NEW YORK TIMES

President Trump threatened to revive his global trade wars Friday, adding a fresh dose of chaos to trade relationships that had calmed somewhat in recent weeks. The president had focused his attention on a trip to the Middle East and a tax bill on Capitol Hill. But Friday, Trump returned to tariffs, saying he would apply a steep tax to European exports starting in just over a week and warning Apple and other phone manufacturers that their products made outside the United States would face a 25 percent tariff, most likely beginning next month. The threats caused stocks to sink and renewed risks to the global economy, as similar announcements made by the president have in recent months. If enacted, economists said the tariffs would pose significant costs for Apple, one of the world's most valuable companies, and rupture US trade with the European Union, the largest trading relationship in the world by some measures. The president wrote on Truth Social on Fri-

TARIFFS, Page A6

Judge blocks order to Harvard

Halts foreign student ban; legality of Trump tactics questioned

By Mike Damiano and Hilary Burns
GLOBE STAFF

In its first legal victory against the Trump administration, Harvard persuaded a federal judge on Friday to block the government's latest salvo against the school: banning the university from enrolling foreign students. US District Court Judge Allison D. Burroughs in Boston said Harvard had shown it could suffer "immediate and irreparable injury" if its approximately 7,000 foreign students were forced to leave the country or transfer to another university. She ordered the administration to temporarily halt enforcement of the ban while litigation between Harvard and the government proceeds. The court battle poses a test for both the legality of the Trump administration's tactics in its pressure campaign against Harvard and the judicial system's ability to rein in what critics allege is government overreach. In a lawsuit filed Friday morning, Harvard's lawyers argued the revocation of the school's ability to enroll foreign students was "a blatant violation of the First Amendment, the Due Process Clause, and the Administrative Procedure Act." Some of the lawyers interviewed by the Globe Friday, including those who teach at Harvard and others who are not affiliated with the case, agreed with the university that the administration's action appeared illegal. Jodie Ferise, a former general counsel at the Independent Colleges of Indiana and former chief international officer at the University of Indianapolis, called the revocation of foreign student enrollment "serious government overreach."

HARVARD, Page A7

EXCHANGE BEGINS

ASSOCIATED PRESS

A Ukrainian soldier reacted after returning from captivity during an exchange between Russia and Ukraine on Friday. The two countries began their largest exchange of prisoners of war, with each side releasing 390 soldiers and civilians, according to both governments. More swaps were expected over the weekend. A4.

“To deny people medically necessary health care, it’s discriminatory, and it’s cruel.”

SEAN CAHILL, director of health policy research, the Fenway Institute

Gender-affirming care targeted in bill

Budget measure that passed House strips coverage for many seeking treatments

By Kay Lazar and Jason Laughlin
GLOBE STAFF

Buried in President Trump's so-called Big Beautiful Bill that passed the House early Thursday are sweeping provisions that strip gender-affirming care from nearly all transgender Americans. Trump has made it a mission to sharply restrict access to gender transition treatments for minors, issuing an executive order to that effect his first week in office. But the new bill goes much further. It prohibits Medicaid or Children's Health Insurance Program funding for any gender-affirming care, including puberty blockers, hormone therapy, and surgeries, for Americans of all ages. A second measure reaches further still; it would require the Affordable Care Act to exclude these types of services from the definition of "essential health benefits," which are the most basic health services that all health insurance plans in the ACA must cover, such as hospitalizations and prescription drugs. The measure, if approved by Congress, would go into effect in January 2027. That doesn't mean private insurance plans can't cover gender-affirming care, but it makes it much less likely they will do so, said Sean Cahill, director of health policy research at the Fenway Institute, which is part of Fenway Health, the largest provider of transgender health care in New England.

TRANSGENDER, Page A6

Some NATO countries have in principle backed a new plan to broaden NATO spending beyond traditional items such as troops and weapons. A4.

At least 60 people were killed by Israeli strikes across Gaza in a 24-hour period, Gaza's health ministry said, as Israel pressed ahead with its military offensive and let in minimal aid to the strip. A5.

The mother of Harmony Montgomery has agreed to a $2.25 million settlement to resolve the wrongful death lawsuit she filed against New Hampshire's child welfare agencies. B1.

Massachusetts is pumping the brakes on its ambitious goals to shift drivers from gas to electric vehicles. D1.

HEEDING THE CALL

BEN STAS FOR THE BOSTON GLOBE

The Boston Calling music festival got underway Friday, despite rainy and cool weather uncommon for Memorial Day weekend. The three-day event continues rain or shine, with performances by big names and New England favorites.

In revolutionary moment, Battle of Chelsea Creek to get its due

1775 fight honored for role in nation's past — and present

By Brian MacQuarrie
GLOBE STAFF

CHELSEA — Long consigned to Revolutionary War obscurity, the Battle of Chelsea Creek in May 1775 has been overshadowed and undervalued when compared with the momentous fighting at Lexington, Concord, and Bunker Hill. But when Chelsea and East Boston commemorate the 250th anniversary of the Revolution's first naval battle this weekend, organizers are hoping the event does more than bring attention to a little-known Colonial victory. Amid Revolutionary reenactors, staged skirmishes, and cannons along modern-day Chelsea Creek, event organizers want many families in the two communities, with their large immigrant presence, to see their own aspirations reflected in that long-ago fight for freedom. "We have the right to be in this land, and that's the beauty of the Battle of Chelsea Creek," said Lourdes Alvarez, a native of Uruguay who is the manager for arts, culture, and creative economy for the City of Chelsea. "We are the ones who live here now, and we have a responsibility to care for and preserve this history. This weekend is a celebration of a whole city." More than a year in the planning, the commemoration of the battle will be the largest ever, organizers said. The Colonial destruction of the HMS CHELSEA, Page A10

Cloud control

Saturday: Cloudy, showers. High: 58-63. Low: 47-52.
Sunday: Breezy, some sun. High: 61-66. Low: 48-53.
Sunrise: 5:15 Sunset: 8:08
Comics and Weather, D4-5.
Obituaries, C9.

VOL. 307, NO. 144

Suggested retail price
$4.00

0 947725 4

20613