

Sixteen Stone by Tiffany

A symbol of love's nurturing forces.

With Love, Since 1837

TIFFANY&CO.

“All the News
That’s Fit to Print”

The New York Times

VOL. CLXXV No. 60,878

© 2026 The New York Times Company

FRIDAY, MAY 8, 2026

Prices in Canada may be higher

$4.00

DAVID GUTTENFELDER/THE NEW YORK TIMES

Fatal Attack in Lebanon

The remains of a Hezbollah site after Israeli strikes last month. On Thursday, Israel said it killed one of the group’s leaders. Page A10.

State Budget Set to Include 2nd-Home Tax

By GRACE ASHFORD
and BENJAMIN ORESKES

ALBANY, N.Y. — New York State leaders have agreed to the framework of a $268 billion budget that will include funding to expand child care and a new tax on multimillion-dollar second homes in New York City, Gov. Kathy Hochul announced on Thursday.

The spending plan will also include a raft of measures intended to push back against the Trump administration’s immigration crackdown, including one barring Immigration and Customs Enforcement agents from wearing masks.

Other major policy initiatives shoehorned into the budget, which is now more than five weeks overdue, include a delay in the state’s climate deadlines and a cap on auto insurance payouts.

“The negotiations were not easy,” Ms. Hochul said on Thursday. “There were very substantive disagreements, tough choices and powerful special interests trying to influence the outcome.”

But legislative leaders cautioned that many issues, including the size of the final budget, still needed to be worked out.

Speaking shortly after Ms. Hochul, the Assembly speaker, Carl E. Heastie, said it had been “very premature” of the governor to announce a deal when he had agreed only that she could say

Continued on Page A17

Few Saw Atlanta’s Potential. Turner Knew Better.

By RICK ROJAS

ATLANTA — Roughly three decades ago, it would have taken only a quick drive through the heart of Atlanta to see how much Ted Turner had made the city his own.

On the right, there was Turner Field, home of the Atlanta Braves, chronic laggards until Mr. Turner transformed them into “America’s Team” by way of very hands-on ownership and games beamed across the country via his Turner Broadcasting System. On the left, poking out of the downtown skyline, was the CNN Center, the hub of a global news organization that invented the 24-hour news cycle and was a towering landmark of his ambitions.

These days, the Turner name and legacy are not as plainly evident in the city. The stadium once known as Turner Field is now named after a local credit union, and CNN has moved into smaller accommodations elsewhere.

And yet, after news spread of Mr. Turner’s death on Wednesday at 87, many in Atlanta said that his influence in redefining the city had not faded. Atlanta was now a capital of entertainment and media, pulsing with a relentless and audacious hustle that could be traced right back to Ted Turner.

“That’s what he did,” said Sheffield Hale, chief executive of the Atlanta History Center. “Without him, it never would have happened. And now, if something big happens in Atlanta, people aren’t

Continued on Page A18

BEN GRAY/THE ATLANTA JOURNAL-CONSTITUTION, VIA ASSOCIATED PRESS

A Hank Aaron statue in 2013 at Turner Field, the Braves’ park at the time, named for Ted Turner.

Tennessee Approves Map That Fractures Its Last Democratic Seat

By EMILY COCHRANE

NASHVILLE — The Tennessee General Assembly gave final approval on Thursday to a new congressional map that slices up Memphis to scatter Black voters into neighboring districts, a move intended to eliminate the state’s last Democratic House seat.

It is the first map crafted since the Supreme Court weakened the remaining provision of the Voting Rights Act, by making it difficult for states to craft majority-minority districts that would not be considered racial gerrymanders. With Tennessee taking the lead, the ruling has opened a new front, particularly in the South, in a bitter, coast-to-coast redistricting battle ahead of November’s midterm elections.

The new map, passed over angry, loud protests that sought to at least slow the vote, splits Memphis and Shelby County into three separate districts, blasting apart the seat of Representative Steve Cohen, Tennessee’s last House Democrat. It also aims to shore up the seat of Representative Andy Ogles, a Republican who was facing a well-funded Democratic challenger, by shifting the boundaries around the liberal city of Nashville.

First Redistricting Since Ruling by Justices

Gov. Bill Lee, a Republican, is expected to sign the bill.

The final vote in the state House exploded into noisy chaos, as Democrats and demonstrators drowned out the final tally with loud noisemakers, yells and alarms. Shortly after, in the State

Continued on Page A16

Global Tariff Ruled Illegal By U.S. Court

A Blow to Trump as He Is Set to Visit Beijing

By TONY ROMM
and ANA SWANSON

WASHINGTON — A panel of federal judges on Thursday found President Trump had violated the law when he imposed a 10 percent tariff on most U.S. imports, dealing yet another legal setback to the White House in its efforts to wage a trade war without the express permission of Congress.

In a split ruling, the Court of International Trade found that Mr. Trump had wrongly invoked a decades-old trade law when he applied those duties beginning in February. The president imposed the levies after his previous set of punishing tariffs was struck down by the Supreme Court.

The decision appeared to place, for now, new limits on Mr. Trump’s trade powers, which he has wielded aggressively in hopes of resetting relationships with allies and adversaries, raising new revenue and encouraging more companies to make their products in the United States.

While the court declared Mr. Trump’s tariffs to be illegal, it only explicitly blocked their collection from small businesses and some states that had sued over their legality. It remained unclear how the administration would interpret that order, though it is widely expected to appeal.

The ruling marked a major setback for Mr. Trump as he prepares to travel to China next week to meet Xi Jinping, its leader, about trade. Tariffs are expected to be a major topic on the agenda, and the court decision could undercut the president’s leverage.

The decision also raised the likelihood that Mr. Trump might once again have to pay back money collected from the illegal duties. A refund process is already underway for the roughly $166 billion collected under Mr. Trump’s prior set of sweeping tariffs.

The White House and the Office of the U.S. Trade Representative did not immediately respond to a request for comment.

From the beginning, the Trump administration envisioned the across-the-board tariff as a temporary solution, one that would buy time for Mr. Trump to craft a more lasting set of higher rates, using other legal authorities. That

Continued on Page A6

Peeved Voters and Many Rivals Make L.A. Mayor Fight for Job

This article is by Shawn Hubler,
Jill Cowan and Conor Dougherty.

LOS ANGELES — Three and a half years ago, when Mayor Karen Bass of Los Angeles took office, the pandemic-worn city looked to her with hope and relief. Tent camps filled with homeless people had consumed parks, beaches and sidewalks. Melrose Avenue merchants had posted armed guards outside high-end sneaker outlets. Malls were bracing for smash-and-grab robberies.

On her first day, Ms. Bass declared an emergency, citing the sheer scope of the homeless situation. As months passed, the size of the unsheltered homeless population and violent crime rates both dropped. Commuters cheered when she tapped state and federal connections to fix and swiftly reopen a damaged freeway.

Then came the fires. Two years into the job, while she

THE WEATHER

Today, morning sun then cloudy, a passing shower late afternoon, high 61. Tonight, increasingly cloudy, low 52. Tomorrow, cloudy, periodic rain, high 62. Weather map, Page A20.

TRUCE FACES TEST AS U.S. AND IRAN EXCHANGE STRIKES

HORMUZ PLAN UNCLEAR

American Military Says It Retaliated for Attacks on Ships in Strait

By FARNAZ FASSIHI

The United States attacked Iranian territory on Thursday, testing a tenuous month-old cease-fire, even as Iranian officials said the two countries were discussing a plan to reopen the Strait of Hormuz and end the American blockade on Iranian ports.

Neither side has reverted to all-out war, but after a period of relative calm, the attacks have begun to intensify since the United Arab Emirates, an American ally, accused Iran of firing missiles and drones at its territory on Monday and Tuesday.

On Wednesday, a U.S. Navy warplane disabled an Iranian-flagged oil tanker that had ignored repeated warnings not to cross the American blockade, U.S. Central Command said.

On Thursday, the fighting escalated as Iran fired missiles and drones and launched small boats to attack three U.S. Navy guided-missile destroyers in the Strait of Hormuz, according to the U.S. military. Iran said it was retaliating for the disabling of the oil tanker, which it said was a violation of the cease-fire.

U.S. forces thwarted the attacks, Central Command said, and then responded by targeting “Iranian military facilities responsible for attacking U.S. forces, including missile and drone launch sites; command and control locations; and intelligence, surveillance and reconnaissance nodes.”

Explosions shook Qeshm Island and the port city of Bandar Abbas, both shipping centers on the Strait of Hormuz, as well as the capital, Tehran, according to Iranian news media, and citizens posting on social media.

Two senior Iranian officials, who asked not to be named because they were discussing sensitive information, said that Bahman pier, a shipbuilding facility on Qeshm, and an Air Force base in Bandar Abbas had been attacked. In Tehran, several residents described fears that the war had

Continued on Page A10

GABRIELA BHASKAR/THE NEW YORK TIMES

Mayor Karen Bass has faced one emergency after another.

was in Ghana attending the inauguration of a new president, Pacific Palisades erupted in flames, claiming 12 lives and destroying thousands of homes in the coastal enclave. She rushed back, demoted the fire chief and tried to explain that she wouldn’t have gone abroad if she had known what would happen.

Continued on Page A16

NATIONAL A11-20

Debt Soars and D.C. Shrugs

The debt is outgrowing the economy, and the president’s policies could accelerate fiscal headaches, experts say, unless policymakers intervene. PAGE A12

BUSINESS B1-6

‘Fired From Retirement’

People return to work for many reasons, but the biggest is financial need. As costs remain high, more retirees may re-enter the job market. PAGE B1

SPORTS B7-10

A Mad Dash to the Tipoff

Opening night has arrived for the Toronto Raptors, Canada’s first W.N.B.A. team. A look at how the franchise assembled a roster in five weeks. PAGE B7

WEEKEND ARTS C1-10

Higher Fashion at the Met

Rather than being hidden below ground, the museum’s fashion department is now the first thing people see when they enter the building. PAGE C1

OPINION A22-23

Julia Belluz

PAGE A22

0 354613 9

With Love, Since 1837

TIFFANY&CO.