

THE WALL STREET JOURNAL.

What's News

Business & Finance

- ◆ Employers are sending a message that in today's uncertain economy workers need to buckle down, complain less and be glad they still have jobs. A1
- ◆ The crucial spring home-selling season is shaping up as a dud, crushing hopes that the housing market can gain significant momentum this year. A2
- ◆ Tariffs are casting a shadow on television's annual "upfront" advertising-sales push, potentially softening ad demand, according to buyers and analysts. B1
- ◆ United Airlines and American are in a turf war at Chicago's O'Hare International Airport, the nation's fourth-busiest. B1
- ◆ "Thunderbolts" retained its top spot at the domestic box office, earning $33.1 million in its second weekend on the big screen and $128.5 million since its release. B2
- ◆ Beef prices hit records as U.S. consumers head into the summer grilling months and aren't expected to ease in the near future. B3
- ◆ Delta Air Lines and Korean Air said they would take stakes in Canadian operator WestJet in deals valued at $550 million. B3
- ◆ Trump's media company narrowed its loss in the first quarter and said its cash on hand should provide the company with the resources to realize its expansion plans. B4
- ◆ Artificial intelligence has begun to change how people search for things online, eating away at the clicks and website traffic that marketers have so far spent millions to attract. B6

World-Wide

- ◆ Officials from the U.S. and China wrapped up their weekend, high-stakes trade talks, with Beijing saying the two sides agreed to start a formal negotiation process and Washington touting progress toward a deal. A1
- ◆ Trump's administration is in talks with the Qatari government about accepting a luxury plane for his use as president and potentially beyond. A1
- ◆ Trump said he would sign an executive order aimed at lowering the cost of prescription drugs, looking to implement a policy that ties U.S. drug prices to what other countries pay. A3
- ◆ The U.S. said it was encouraged by talks with Iran in Oman, but the two sides remain divided on questions that include whether Tehran would be allowed to enrich its own uranium. A7
- ◆ Hamas said that it would release the last American hostage held in Gaza, Edan Alexander, after discussions with the U.S. A6
- ◆ A video of Sean Combs assaulting and dragging an ex-girlfriend in a Los Angeles hotel in 2016 is set to play a major role in his trial on sex-trafficking charges. A3
- ◆ Ukraine's Zelensky challenged Putin to meet him in Istanbul this week after Trump swung behind the Russian president's offer of talks before a cease-fire. A6
- ◆ A Soviet-era spacecraft plunged to Earth in an uncontrolled entry more than a half-century after its failed launch to Venus. A7

CONTENTS
Opinion.....	A15-17
Arts in Review.....	A13
Business & Finance.....	B1-12
Business News.....	B3
Crossword.....	A14
Heard on Street.....	B12
Marketing.....	B6
Personal Journal.....	A11-12
Sports.....	A14
Technology.....	B4-6
The Ticker.....	B8
U.S. News.....	A2-5
World News.....	A6-8

India-Pakistan Truce Holds After Diplomatic Push

UNFURLED: People rallied in support of Pakistan's army in Lahore on Sunday as a fragile cease-fire between India and Pakistan appeared to hold through the weekend after what President Trump described as a U.S.-brokered deal. A8

Sexual-Abuse Probe Colors ICC Case Against Netanyahu

Move to pursue Israeli leader came as prosecutor faced his own accusations

By MATTHEW DALTON

Two months after the Hamas attack of Oct. 7, pressure was mounting on Karim Khan, the chief prosecutor of the International Criminal Court, as he considered charges against Israeli officials for their conduct of the war in Gaza. Pro-Palestinian activists who had labeled him a "genocide enabler" and a bloc of ICC member countries in the developing world insisted that action was long overdue, pushing Khan into conflict with Israel's staunch allies in Washington and other Western capitals. Khan, a hard-charging British lawyer, was in New York in early December 2023 for the court's governing body meeting at United Nations headquarters. Stung by the criticism, the 55-year-old prosecutor was increasingly lashing out at his team, according to ICC officials. One assistant, a woman in her 30s who often traveled with him for her job, asked to meet with Khan to urge him to ease up. He called her that evening to his corner suite high in the Millennium Hilton hotel next to the U.N. There, she said in testimony to U.N. officials, Khan began to touch her sexually, a pattern of behavior that she said had been going on for months. She said she attempted to leave the room several times, but he took her hand and eventually pulled her to the bed. Then he pulled off her pants and forced sexual intercourse, according to the testimony. "He always holds on to me and leads me to the bed," she said in the testimony, which Please turn to page A10

◆ Hamas set to release last U.S. hostage..... A6

Bosses Talk Tough With Staff Amid Power Shift

By CHIP CUTTER

Corporate America's long-running war for talent sounds more like a war on the talent these days. Not long ago, bosses routinely praised workers as their most prized asset, so much that some hoarded new hires before having enough for them to do. Today, with a giant question mark hanging over the economy, executives are pulling no punches in saying employees need to work harder, complain less and be glad they still have jobs. "Work-life balance is your problem," Emma Grede, co-founder of the shapewear company Skims and CEO of clothing label Good American, said this month. After recently cutting more than 1,000 jobs, Starbucks CEO Brian Niccol said remaining corporate staff needed to step it up and "own whether or not this place grows." JPMorgan CEO Jamie Dimon, in a profanity-laced internal meeting, told employees lamenting a return-to-work mandate that he didn't care. "I've had it with this kind of stuff," he said. "I've been working seven days a week since Covid, and I come in, and—where is everybody else?" The shift in tone marks a shift in power now that companies are shrinking their white-collar staff. With jobs harder to find, many workers are seeing perks disappear and their grievances ignored. The latest episode happened at a contentious all-hands at Uber last month. The company had just changed the requirements to get a monthlong paid sabbatical to eight years of working at the ride-hail giant, from five years. A decision to require people to work at least Please turn to page A8

Trade War Rattles Bonds

Longer-term Treasury yields are rising, keeping borrowing costs higher. B1

Potential Gift of Air Force One From Qatar Brings Scrutiny

By JOSH DAWSEY AND TARINI PARTI

President Trump's administration is in talks with the Qatari government about accepting a luxury plane for his use as president and potentially beyond, according to people familiar with the matter. Under the potential arrangement, which is raising legal and ethical concerns, the plane owned by the Qatari royal family would be used as Air Force One while Trump is in office after being retrofitted by a U.S. defense contractor. The U.S. wouldn't pay for the luxury 747-style jumbo jet.

It may then be given to the Trump presidential library for Trump to use after he leaves office, the people said. ABC News earlier reported on the potential of the plane being made a gift, and a senior Trump administration official said the president expected the plane to be a gift. The Qatari government, however, said the matter was still under discussion. "Reports that a jet is being gifted by Qatar to the United States government during the upcoming visit of President Trump are inaccurate. The possible transfer of an aircraft for temporary use as Air Force One is currently under consideration between Qatar's Ministry of Defense and the U.S. Department of Defense, but the matter remains under review by the respective legal departments, and no decision has been made," said Ali Al-Ansari, Qatar's media attaché to the U.S. Trump is expected to visit Qatar this week. "Any gift given by a foreign government is always accepted in full compliance with all applicable laws. President Trump's Administration is committed to full transparency," White House spokeswoman Karoline Leavitt said. The senior administration Please turn to page A4

These Political Rivals Pull Off The Unthinkable: Staying Friends

In a Congress rife with petty squabbles, across-the-aisle friendships are rare

By KRISTINA PETERSON

WASHINGTON—Every morning Congress is in session, a bipartisan group of lawmakers meets in the House gym at 6:30 a.m. for an hour of cardio and weights. Discussing politics is forbidden. Lawmakers who transgress are forced to do burpees. "That's the standing rule. Everybody knows that," said Sen. Markwayne Mullin. The Oklahoma Republican, a former professional mixed martial arts fighter, has led the group of 15-20 lawmakers through the Crossfit-like workout for a dozen years. The gathering, where for once groans aren't directed at one another, is a rarity on Capitol Hill these days. During the second Trump administration the political distance between Democrats and Republicans has increased, particularly in Congress, where petty squabbles are common and across-the-aisle friendships are rare. Threats to censure lawmakers and yank them off committees had already abounded. One House committee hearing last year descended into chaos after Rep. Marjorie Taylor Greene (R., Ga.) asked Rep. Jasmine Crockett (D., Texas) if her fake eyelashes were impeding her ability to read, prompting Crockett to fire back about a "beach blonde, bad-built, butch body." "In [mixed martial arts], if you get hit in the back of the head, you got a point taken away from the person who did it. In politics, it's just called Please turn to page A4

ORACLE

Oracle Cloud Database now runs everywhere

- ✓ AWS
- ✓ Azure
- ✓ Google
- ✓ Oracle Cloud
- ✓ Your data center

Autonomous Exadata powered Pay with cloud vendor credits Advanced AI included for FREE

oracle.com/data

