

Stakes rise as Epstein subpoena hits DOJ

Move required by July vote puts House GOP on path to clash with Trump

BY KADIA GOBA
AND JEREMY ROEBUCK

The Republican-led House subpoenaed the Justice Department on Tuesday for its files on convicted sex offender Jeffrey Epstein, potentially setting up a contentious standoff between Congress and the Trump administration over an issue that has sparked major headaches for President Donald Trump.

House Oversight Committee Chairman James Comer (R-Kentucky) formally issued the subpoena nearly two weeks after one of the panel's subcommittees — with some GOP support — voted to compel the Justice Department to release the files. Under House rules, Comer was obligated to issue the subpoena, and no full House vote was required.

Along with a demand for the Epstein documents, the chairman also subpoenaed documents or testimony from several high-profile figures, who had either

SEE SUBPOENA ON A5

2016 election: DOJ escalates probe of Obama administration. A4

Attack sparks Trump threat to take over the District

BY EMILY DAVIES,
OLIVIA GEORGE
AND MEAGAN FLYNN

A protégé of Elon Musk and former DOGE staffer was injured in an attempted carjacking early Sunday morning in D.C., two people familiar with the incident said, in an attack that captured the attention of President Donald Trump and reinvigorated his threats to take over the nation's capital.

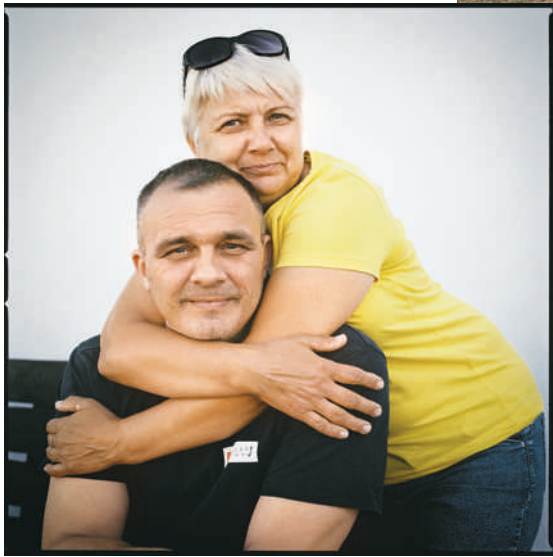

"If D.C. doesn't get its act together, and quickly, we will have no choice but to take Federal control of the City, and run this City how it should be run, and put criminals on notice that they're not going to get away with it anymore," Trump wrote Tuesday on Truth Social.

Billionaire Elon Musk, who helmed the U.S. DOGE Service, wrote on X that a DOGE "team member" was attacked, and Musk called to federalize D.C. The two people familiar with the incident, who spoke on the condition of anonymity because they weren't

SEE D.C. ON A4

Three families found a way to survive the unrest at home — until Moscow decided to seize the region entirely.

Long before Russia's 2022 full-scale invasion, war simmered in eastern Ukraine.

PHOTOGRAPHS BY ANASTASIA TAYLOR-LIND

Displaced elsewhere in the country, they fear they may never be able to return to their past lives.

Forced to leave Donbas

BY ANASTASIA TAYLOR-LIND AND ALISA SOPOVA

With President Donald Trump's effort to end Russia's war in Ukraine in its seventh month, many Ukrainians — particularly those who once lived in areas now occupied by Russia — remain deeply skeptical. It is an attitude rooted in experience.

Russia's attacks on Ukraine began in 2014, with the invasion and annexation of Crimea and a Kremlin-backed separatist uprising in the country's eastern Donbas region. Until 2022, this war — which had its own peace negotiations that went nowhere — was commonly referred to as a "forgotten" one, except among the hundreds of thousands of Ukrainians who lived in the region. They found themselves in limbo. Artillery shells occasionally fell from the sky; roads and fields were mined; bureaucracies and infrastructure were broken; and front lines cut through communities, severing people from their families, jobs and properties. But they were home.

Since 2018 — years before Russia's full-scale invasion — photographer Anastasia Taylor-Lind and writer Alisa Sopova have been documenting the daily lives of three families that were forced to flee. And with negotiations underway that could cement Russia's territorial conquests, they fear they may never be able to revisit their past lives again.

SEE UKRAINE ON A10

Vouchers roil Arizona public schools

BY LAURA MECKLER

PHOENIX — The party at John R. Davis Elementary School was in full swing, but at the snow cone station, the school's librarian was in tears.

In the cafeteria, alumni marveled at old photographs on display and shook their heads. On a wall of the library, visitors posted sticky notes to describe their feelings: "Angry," read a purple square. "Anxious," said a pink one. "Annoyed." "Heart broken." "Bummed." And more than any

As campuses fold, model offers a view into GOP's vision for K-12 education

other word: "Sad."

Ten days later, John R. Davis Elementary School would close — not just for the summer, but for good.

Now, as the new school year begins, the Roosevelt Elementary School District opens with just 13 schools. That's almost a third fewer than it had last spring, a response to enrollment declines as the state offers unprecedented taxpayer funding for alternatives to public school.

The party gave the community a few hours to celebrate the school's 43 years — to say goodbye.

"It's a grieving process for me," Antonette Nunez, the librarian, told a pair of Davis graduates who dropped by the party. Everyone at the party, it seemed, was feeling

SEE VOUCHERS ON A18

MELINA MARA/THE WASHINGTON POST

Bobbie Watterson, a teacher at Martin Luther King Jr. Elementary, one of the public schools in Arizona to close, hugs a student in May.

Israelis briefed on war options

NETANYAHU SET ON OCCUPYING GAZA

Palestinians, relatives of hostages fearful of plans

BY SHIRA RUBIN,
LIOR SOROKA
AND ABBIE CHEESEMAN

TEL AVIV — The Israeli military's chief of staff presented Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu and other security and defense officials with options for expanding operations in the Gaza Strip, a government statement said Tuesday. The high-stakes consultations came as Netanyahu appeared determined to press ahead with plans to fully occupy the Palestinian enclave, despite growing opposition to the war both at home and abroad.

The prime minister "held a limited security discussion today . . . in which the Chief of Staff presented the options for continuing the campaign in Gaza," a statement from his office said. The Israel Defense Forces is "prepared to implement any decision" made by Netanyahu's security cabinet, which he plans to convene later this week, the statement added.

The plan to occupy all of Gaza means that "military operations will also take place in areas where hostages are being held," said a person familiar with the prime minister's decisions who spoke on the condition of anonymity

SEE GAZA ON A9

Palestinian state: Democrats sign a letter calling for recognition. A9

Texas's GOP governor sues to oust top Democrat

He says officials who left during redistricting fight 'abandoned their duty'

BY PATRICK MARLEY,
HANNAH KNOWLES,
YVONNE WINGETT SANCHEZ
AND MOLLY HENNESSY-FISCHE

Texas Gov. Greg Abbott (R) asked the state's high court Tuesday to remove a top Democratic lawmaker from office, arguing he had abandoned his job by leading dozens of his colleagues out of the state to block a GOP plan to redraw the state's congressional map ahead of next year's midterm elections.

The move sharply escalated a standoff that has mushroomed into a national political battle over congressional districts, with red and blue states threatening to redraw their maps to benefit their side in elections that will determine control of the U.S. House.

"Texas House Democrats abandoned their duty to Texans, and there must be consequences," Abbott said in a statement.

Abbott filed his lawsuit as other top Republicans raised the

SEE TEXAS ON A6

The Take: Democrats risk backfire in mulling redistricting reprisals. A6

IN THE NEWS

Execution in Tennessee A 69-year-old man convicted of three murders was put to death after a first-of-its-kind legal battle over the deactivation of his implanted heart device. A2

Orange juice A proposed regulation that would affect sugar levels responds to industry concerns about Florida's changing crop. A4

THE NATION

The Titan submersible tragedy that killed five people was preventable, the Coast Guard said. A7
President Donald Trump redoubled his attack on jobs data and defended a firing. A14

THE WORLD

Five years after a deadly port explosion in Beirut, justice is still elusive for its victims. A10
A Danish zoo is seeking unwanted pets — to turn into food for its predators. A12

THE ECONOMY

Trump is close to issuing an executive order that could penalize lenders for "de-banking" crypto investors and other clients. A14

STYLE

The Las Culturistas spoof awards show started as a joke. Now the stars show up. B1

SPORTS

Trump established a task force for the L.A. Olympics and said he could use the military to keep the Games safe. B7

THE REGION

Montgomery County's public school system has fallen behind on thousands of criminal history checks. B13

The D.C. area is feeling the economic ripple effects of federal spending cuts across multiple sectors. These charts show how. B13

FOOD

You don't need fancy, expensive equipment to make great cold-brew coffee at home. E1

BUSINESS NEWS.....	A13
COMICS	B4
OBITUARIES	B16
OPINION PAGES	A15
TELEVISION	B6
WORLD NEWS.....	A8

CONTENT © 2025
The Washington Post
Year 148, No. 54300

