Data reveals depth of deportations

Most of 3,800 detained and 2,500 deported had no criminal record, despite White House claims

Newly released data shows that Operation Midway Blitz led to the deportation of nearly 2,500 immigrants — most of them with no criminal record — during last fall’s immigration enforcement surge that fueled massive protests and led to two shootings, one deadly. A Tribune analysis of the data, released Monday, offers the first comprehensive look to date of the roughly 3,800 people detained and what happened to them after they were picked up in the two-month operation that included often-masked and heavily militarized agents using forceful tactics during their controversial roundups, which spurred chaos-filled scenes and led court orders to limit agents’ unconstitutional actions. The U.S. Department of Homeland Security lauded the operation for removing what it called “the worst of the worst criminal illegal aliens who put the American people in danger.” Critics have

Museum off table at former MJ home

Neighbors opposed possible noise, traffic

FOR THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE

With an unanimous 7-0 vote, the Highland Park City Council on Monday night shot down plans to turn Chicago Bulls legend Michael Jordan’s former mansion into a museum that would have received between 100,000 and 180,000 visitors each year. John Cooper, who bought the property from Jordan for $9.5 million in December 2024, initially proposed renting out the 37,700-square-foot mansion at 2700 Point Lane for short-term stays and offering fractional ownership shares in the estate. Both concepts were met with resistance by city leaders, and for the past few months, Cooper has been developing a new idea to convert the property into a museum. Cooper envisioned the museum as an attraction that would draw schoolchildren and other visitors from around the

An emotional goodbye

Fire trucks lined up outside a funeral home in Chicago’s southwest suburbs on a gray and rainy Tuesday morning for the funeral of Michael Altman, a Chicago firefighter who died while working to put out a Rogers Park fire earlier this month. The private services began around 10 a.m. at Blake-Lamb Funeral Home in Oak Lawn and then continued at Holy Sepulchre Catholic Cemetery and Mausoleum in Alsip, according to the Chicago Fire Department. Altman’s funeral had been postponed from last week after his wife went into labor. The First responders lined the sidewalks, and police cars filled the parking lot. Mark Conrad, 63, stood outside the funeral home Tuesday morning in his white officer cap to pay his respects. Conrad retired from CFD in 2017 after 29 years of service. He said he worked as a firefighter and then lieutenant in Lincoln Park and even worked alongside Altman’s father.

Justices rule against ‘conversion therapy’ ban

By Ann E. Marimow
THE NEW YORK TIMES

WASHINGTON — The Supreme Court on Tuesday overwhelmingly sided with a Christian therapist, rejecting a Colorado law that prohibited mental health professionals from trying to change the sexual orientation or gender identity of LGBTQ+ minors. The court’s decision has implications for more than 20 other states that have similar laws barring so-called conversion therapy, and is a win for conservatives. Critics and major medical organizations say such therapy is ineffective and potentially dangerous for young people. But in its 8-1 decision, the court said the law, as applied to talk therapy, represented an “egregious assault” on free speech and the First Amendment. “Colorado may regard its policy as essential to public health and safety,” Justice Neil Gorsuch wrote for justices from across the ideological spectrum. “But the
