

THE WALL STREET JOURNAL.

DOW JONES | News Corp *****

WEDNESDAY, APRIL 30, 2025 ~ VOL. CCLXXXV NO. 100

WSJ.com

★★★★ $5.00

DJIA 40527.62 ▲ 300.03 0.75% NASDAQ 17461.32 ▲ 0.5% STOXX 600 525.09 ▲ 0.4% 10-YR. TREAS. ▲ 11/32, yield 4.171% OIL $60.42 ▼ $1.63 GOLD $3,318.80 ▼ $14.20 EURO $1.1387 YEN 142.35

What's News

Business & Finance

◆ The biggest U.S. retailers have so far held the line on price increases, but some chief executives have warned that the status quo can't last indefinitely. A1

◆ Major U.S. stock indexes continued their recent climb, with the S&P 500, Dow industrials and Nasdaq advancing 0.6%, 0.7% and 0.5%, respectively. B1

◆ UPS said it would cut 20,000 operational positions this year, moving to slash expenses after parting ways with Amazon, its biggest customer. B1

◆ BP said it aimed to boost its oil and gas production in the U.S. by more than 50% by the end of the decade as it slashes green spending and pivots back to fossil fuels. B2

◆ Conservative activist Robby Starbuck sued Meta, alleging its AI tool defamed him by falsely asserting he participated in the Jan. 6, 2021, riot at the Capitol. B4

◆ GM reported that its net income fell 6.6% in the first quarter and shelved its 2025 profit guidance, saying the future impact of tariffs could be significant. B2

◆ Coca-Cola said it can manage the effects of tariffs, but that lower sales to Hispanic consumers dented revenue in the U.S. and other markets, including Mexico. B3

◆ SportsNet New York, the broadcast home of the New York Mets, has hired bankers to explore potential deals including an outright sale. B4

◆ Addidas reiterated its views for the year, but warned that tariffs could weigh on the sporting-goods company's performance. B3

World-Wide

◆ Having promised Canadians protection from Trump, Prime Minister Mark Carney is set on a course of decoupling his country's economy from its biggest trading partner and, lately, its biggest threat. A1

◆ Trump spoke at a rally in Michigan to mark his first 100 days in office, an event that marked a return to the campaign-style events that helped make him a political force. A4

◆ China's economy showed its first big signs of damage from the trade war, as steep U.S. tariffs pummeled export orders and production at the country's factories. A9

◆ The Trump administration must temporarily keep funding a program that provides lawyers to unaccompanied migrant children, a federal judge in California said. A3

◆ Trump moved to soften the impact of his automotive tariffs, preventing duties on foreign-made cars from being stacked on top of other tariffs he has imposed and easing some other levies. A2

◆ Harvard released its reports on campus antisemitism and anti-Muslim bias, documents that paint a critical picture of the university's political and academic climate. A3

◆ The Trump administration dismissed a group of scientists and researchers working on the federal government's evaluation of the impact of climate change. A6

◆ Russia began a spring of offensive against Ukraine, taking advantage of firmer terrain that can support heavy vehicles and denser foliage that provides cover for troops. A8

CONTENTS	Markets Digest..... B9
Arts in Review..... A13	Opinion..... A15-17
Business & Finance B2-6	Personal Journal A11-12
Capital Account..... A2	Property Report..... B6
Crossword..... A14	Sports..... A14
Heard on Street..... B12	U.S. News..... A2-4,6
Markets..... B11	World News..... A8-10

© 2025 Dow Jones & Company, Inc. All Rights Reserved

Trade War Blurs Profit Forecasts

More companies pull guidance as Trump's tariffs undermine ability to look ahead

A new wave of major U.S. and European companies, including General Motors, JetBlue, Snap and Volvo, are warning that the trade war's unknowable course and consequences make it futile to forecast future performance.

GM, JetBlue and Volvo on Tuesday all shelved earlier profit guidance for 2025 due to economic uncertainty. The shape-shifting nature of President Trump's automotive duties have clouded the outlook, GM said, while JetBlue predicted that softer demand would plague the airline into the summer. Snapchat parent company Snap said it wouldn't issue guidance like it normally does and said the social-media platform could suffer from an advertising slump. United Parcel Service didn't update its outlook, though it predicted lower shipping volumes and revenue for the second quarter. It also said 20,000 workers would be laid off.

By Chip Cutter, Bob Tita and Stephen Wilmot

Cutting costs at the company couldn't be timelier

given the fast-evolving macroeconomic environment, where tariffs are a major point of uncertainty, UPS Chief Executive Carol Tomé told analysts and investors.

The shipper has talked to its top 100 customers in the U.S. to understand how their

Please turn to page A6

◆ Tariffs start taking toll on China economy..... A9
◆ GM cites lack of clarity in pulling outlook..... B2

Prime Minister Mark Carney of Canada gestured during a Liberal Party election night event in Ottawa on Tuesday.

Canada Picks Leader to Fight Trump

By VIPAL MONGA

After his promises to protect Canadian voters from U.S. President Trump, Prime Minister Mark Carney must make quick work of a radical plan: decoupling Canada's economy from its biggest trading partner and, lately, its biggest threat.

Carney, a technocrat who ran the Bank of Canada during the financial crisis and the Bank of England during Brexit, won Canada's national election on Monday on the strength of his assertion that he is the right leader to take on Trump. Success means unwinding a Canadian foreign policy that since World War II has centered on building a closer union with the U.S.

Still, his Liberal Party fell short of a majority in parliament, which means he will need to work with rival politicians to push through his economic agenda.

Speaking to supporters after his victory early Tuesday, Carney said Canada was entering into a new, uncertain era. "Our old relationship with the United States, a relationship based on steadily increasing integration, is over," he said. Carney said he plans to negotiate a new trade and security deal with Trump—who has threatened to make Canada the 51st state and hobble its export-reliant economy with tariffs—while at the same time supercharging Canada's trade with Europe and Asia.

"The system of open global

Please turn to page A10

◆ Greg Ip: Canada vote tests Trump's trade theory..... A2

Morning! The 4 a.m. Wake-Up Isn't Just For CEOs

By SAM SCHUBE

In recent years, the 4 a.m. wake-up has been the domain of world-striding executives and businesspeople. Disney CEO Bob Iger famously begins his day with a predawn workout. Apple CEO Tim Cook deals with emails from customers before sunrise.

"There's almost a kind of arms race between different executives and self-styled business leaders over who can claim the highest average workload," said Erik Baker, author of "Make Your Own Job: How the Entrepreneurial Work Ethic Exhausted America."

But in March, the 4 a.m. wake-up achieved new status after a viral video showed a very muscular man named Ashton Hall performing a morning routine that involved mouth tape, an ice bath filled with bottled Saratoga water, and a banana peel rubbed across his face—all beginning at 3:55 a.m.

"Sin lives late at night," according to a February social-media post by Hall, who couldn't be reached for comment. "If you're dealing with a weak mind, bad decisions, or lack of productivity go to sleep early."

In the days that followed, seemingly half the internet—from Ed Sheeran to Duolingo's owl mascot—posted clips parodying Hall's routine.

Please turn to page A12

INSIDE

BUSINESS & FINANCE

Deloitte to lease nearly three-quarters of a planned New York City skyscraper. B1

Marriage of Microsoft, OpenAI Turns Rocky as Bosses' Ties Fray

Sam Altman once said OpenAI and Microsoft had the "best partnership in tech." Now, their Silicon Valley marriage is on the rocks.

Deepa Seetharaman, Berber Jin and Keach Hagey

Microsoft turbocharged the artificial-intelligence startup's growth over the past six years with billions of dollars in funding, helping OpenAI's ChatGPT accumulate more than 500 million weekly users. OpenAI powered cutting-edge generative AI tools for the technology giant, helping its share price triple.

That relationship has become strained. The chief executive officers are increasingly at odds over the computing power Microsoft provides to OpenAI, the access the startup gives the technology giant to its models and whether the Altman-led company's AI systems will soon achieve humanlike intelligence, according to people familiar with their relationship. Microsoft CEO Satya Nadella has also made it a priority to beef up sales and usage of ChatGPT rival Copilot, and last year hired a rival of Altman's who launched a secret effort to build models for Microsoft

Please turn to page A6

This Museum's Main Attraction: Anyone Who Looks American

* * *

Schoolchildren beg U.S. visitors for selfies, handshakes at new shrine to Vietnam War

By STU WOO

HANOI—David McCaskey visited the new war museum here to see the American planes, helicopters and tanks from the Vietnam War.

But the 33-year-old graduate student from Buffalo, N.Y., quickly realized those exhibits were playing second fiddle to the museum's star attraction: David McCaskey.

As soon as he entered the gates, about 30 schoolchildren in identical tracksuits swarmed him. They wanted a photo. Then another group did. And another. After 20 minutes of smiling for more than 100 children, he put on a face mask and sunglasses and finally slipped away.

"It's the closest I'll ever get to being a celebrity," McCaskey said.

The Vietnam War ended 50 years ago Wednesday when North Vietnamese tanks rolled through Saigon, capital of the U.S.-backed South Vietnam. Today, tourists visiting the land of their onetime enemy are discovering that Americans are by and large beloved here.

At the Military History Museum, a Smithsonian-like campus that celebrates Vietnam's wartime achievements and condemns what it calls a U.S. invasion, the biggest draw is anyone who looks like a Yankee.

Schoolchildren, many from small towns who have never seen a foreigner before, are desperate to score a selfie with a member of the defeated party. It's akin to an American at Bunker Hill clamoring for a

Please turn to page A11

Retailers Hold Firm On Prices, Warn It Can't Last

Stores work to avoid passing on costs but some products might become scarce

To keep prices low on phone chargers, towels and blenders in the face of rising tariffs, the U.S.'s largest retailers are trying everything.

By Sarah Nassauer, Shane Shifflett and Sebastian Herrera

They are pressuring their suppliers to absorb cost increases and dropping free perks from corporate offices. They paused some shipments of goods from China and are leaning on inventory that was already imported to the U.S.

So far, most prices have held steady overall. The average price of some 10,000 everyday household products sold online by Walmart, Target and Amazon is effectively flat since April 2, according to a Wall Street Journal analysis of data harvested by e-commerce-data firm Traject Data. Prices at the retailers are generally down since January, the data show.

But the chief executives of Walmart, Target and Home Depot met with President Trump last week, with a strong message: The status quo can't last forever.

They warned Trump that higher prices would be difficult to avoid and said certain products could become scarce if retailers decide not to sell them to avoid tariff costs. They assured the president they would work to keep product prices as low as possible for as long as

Please turn to page A2

◆ Amazon rules out showing tariffs' effect on prices... A2
◆ President eases auto-duty impact..... A2

Agentforce can help millions of flyers navigate travel hiccups. Every hour.

Agentforce What AI Was Meant to Be