

The Boston Globe

Serving our community since 1872

FRIDAY, JUNE 6, 2025

TRUMP

‘Elon was “wearing thin,” I asked him to leave.’

MUSK

‘Without me, Trump would have lost the election. . . . Such ingratitude.’

Like that, honeymoon is over for Trump/Musk

War of words intensifies as tensions become public

By Tyler Pager and Theodore Schleifer
NEW YORK TIMES

WASHINGTON — President Trump on Thursday threatened to cut the billions of dollars in federal contracts and tax subsidies for Elon Musk’s companies, and Musk backed the president’s impeachment, escalating a feud that unfurled on social media in remarkably public fashion.

Their unlikely alliance dissolved into open acrimony at stunning speed, with the two men hurling personal attacks at each other over matters both significant and petty.

What started as a fight over Trump’s domestic policy bill escalated into one over who deserved more credit for Trump’s latest election victory, why Musk did not cover up a black eye with makeup, and whether the government should cut its contracts with Musk’s companies.

“The easiest way to save money in our Budget, Billions and Billions of Dollars, is to terminate Elon’s Governmental Subsidies and Contracts,” Trump wrote on Truth Social. “I was always surprised that Biden didn’t do it!”

While meeting with Friedrich Merz, Germany’s new chancellor, in the Oval Office, Trump broke days of uncharacteristic silence and unloaded on Musk, who until last week was a top presidential adviser.

“I’m very disappointed in Elon,” Trump said. “I’ve helped Elon a lot.”

As the president criticized Musk, the billionaire responded in real time on X, the social media platform he owns.

MUSK, Page A6

Travel ban could face less resistance this time around

By Samantha J. Gross and Tiana Woodard
GLOBE STAFF

Days after President Trump took office in January 2017, he made good on a campaign promise to ban immigrants from predominantly Muslim countries from traveling to the United States.

Described as a “Muslim ban” by Trump’s aides as well as his critics, it sparked protests nationwide, disruption and chaos at airports, and prompted a federal district court ruling that briefly turned Boston into an entry point for previously banned immigrants.

On Wednesday night, Trump reprised a version of the travel ban, though different in important ways. And so too, is the reaction to it; now, instead of a cohesive legal front that slowed though ultimately failed to stop a version of the 2017 ban, some critics and experts are fearful this one will face less resistance.

The new travel ban prohibits citizens of 12 countries from entering the United States, and those from seven others would face certain visa restrictions. It does make exceptions for some groups of people, such as green card holders or athletes competing in international

BAN, Page A6

Milford teen released by ICE

After ordeal, Gomes returns to family and friends following judge’s order

ERIN CLARK/GLOBE STAFF

Marcelo Gomes da Silva (center) was embraced by friends outside his Milford home after his release from ICE detention.

By Giulia McDonnell Nieto del Rio, Nick Stoico, and Marcela Rodrigues
GLOBE STAFF

MILFORD — Six days after federal immigration officials detained Milford High School student Marcelo Gomes da Silva on his way to volleyball practice, a federal judge ordered his release Thursday and Gomes was able to reunite with his family and friends in an emotional scene.

“Viva Marcelo!” a family member shouted as dozens of others cried and applauded shortly after Gomes arrived at the family home in Milford. Tears ran down his mother’s face as she watched through her kitchen window as the car pulled up to their house. His mother, Daiane Gomes Pereira, then walked outside and hugged her son for the first time since he was detained on Saturday.

After a quick shower, Gomes returned to the crowd of friends and other family members, hugging and thanking them for their support.

“I can’t wait to get back to school,” he told reporters at the house. “I have finals.”

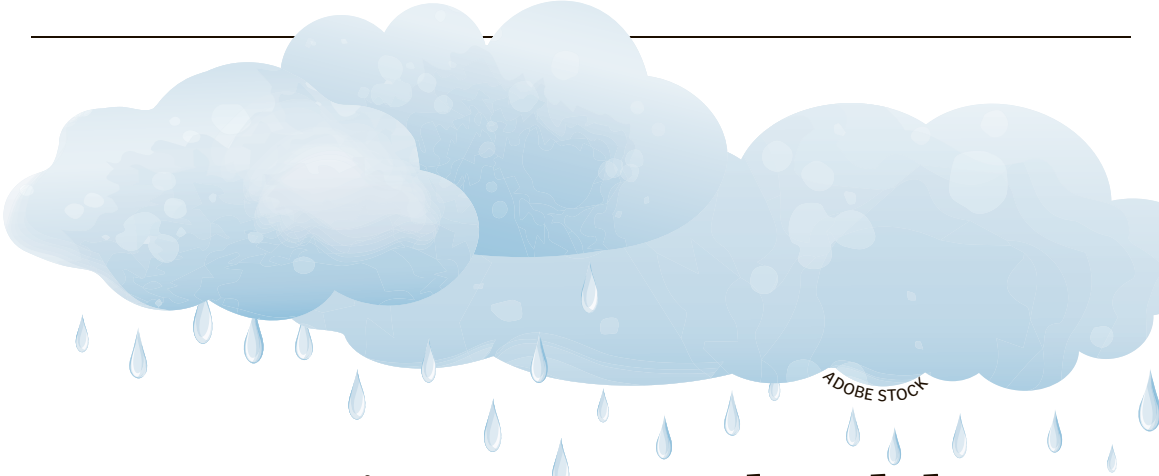

The 18-year-old, who was born in Brazil and has lived in the United States since he was 6, was arrested Saturday morning by ICE agents as he was heading to volleyball practice with teammates. Immigration officials have said they were searching for his father, João Paulo Gomes Pereira, when they arrested Gomes, who has no criminal record.

The arrest sparked outrage in Milford and an outpouring of support for his family. More than 1,000 demonstrators, including Gomes’s classmates, protested his detention outside Milford Town Hall the next day. His volleyball teammates dedicated their MIAA Division 1 tournament game on Tuesday to Gomes, where they wore white shirts during warm-ups with messages such as “Justice 4 Mar” and “Free Marcelo.”

The day after Gomes was arrested, his at-

RELEASE, Page A7

Come again? More weekend drops, with 100% chance of rage

By Beth Teitell
GLOBE STAFF

It was afternoon on Boston Common and the sky was a chef’s kiss. A baby in sunglasses sauntered by in a carrier. A woman opened a parasol. A sunbather squinted to read her phone, what with all the glare.

“You got one of the best days,” a tour guide in a tricorner hat and regimental coat told his flip-flopped flock.

And it was true. But also . . . the vibes were somehow off. What was it, exactly? Oh, that’s right.

IT’S ALL SO TOTALLY UNFAIR!!!

“It should be a Saturday,” said Jennifer Hatch, a public sector worker on her lunch break, “but it’s Tuesday.”

She enjoyed the last of her slushie, and then it was time to head back to — where else — work. Another glorious day mediated through an office window.

Why are we being taunted by basically everything? Our sports teams are flaming out. Market Basket is turning into “Succession.” Sydney Sweeney is selling her bath water and people want it.

And making it all worse: the weekend washouts.

Since mid-March we’ve been dumped on for part of every weekend. Sometimes both days. For 12 weekends in a row. Three months. That’s longer than the Orange Line shutdown of 2022; than Rafael Devers’s batting slump at the start of this season; than it takes to wait in line at the RMV for your Real ID, for goodness’ sake.

On Wednesday, aka a WORK day, the sky hosted a hazy sun and the weather apps on our phones showed rain on Friday and Saturday and clouds for Sunday. “Is this city gaslighting us?”

WET, Page A4

International students fear Harvard dream is in jeopardy

By Brooke Hauser, Spencer Buell, and Shelley Murphy
GLOBE STAFF

Panicked emails from students abroad are filling professors’ inboxes. Scholars from overseas headed here to learn about American democracy are too scared to sign leases in Boston. Students who bet their future on a Harvard degree are suddenly feeling pangs of regret.

President Trump’s proclamation Wednesday that he will bar Harvard’s international students from entering the country signaled an extraordinary and hostile escalation in his battle with the nearly 400-year-old university. Trump also said Secretary of State Marco Rubio would consider revoking the visas of international students currently enrolled at Harvard after a case-by-case review.

Harvard hit back Thursday night, asking a federal judge to issue a temporary restraining order blocking the travel restriction, arguing that the president is pursuing “a government vendetta” against the school. The motion was filed in Harvard’s existing lawsuit to stop the White House from revoking its right to enroll international students. The judge presiding over the case granted Harvard’s request late

STUDENTS, Page A7

The Supreme Court ruled in favor of a straight woman who twice lost positions to gay workers. A2.

The slumping value of Boston office buildings could have worse effects than previously predicted, a report says. B5.

The House approved an overhaul of marijuana oversight in the state, targeting the Cannabis Control Commission. B5.

“The Life of Chuck,” based on a Stephen King novella, is a touching and beautiful film, writes Odie Henderson. G1.

Rock the bolt

Friday: Cooler, T-storms. High 73-78. Low 60-65.

Saturday: Cloudy, humid. High 71-76. Low 59-64.

Weather and Comics, G6-7. Obituaries, C9.

New Bruins coach is an old friend

Marco Sturm, who will become the first German head coach in NHL history, played five seasons in Boston. C1.

VOL. 307, NO. 157

Suggested retail price $4.00