

The Boston Globe

Serving our community since 1872

MONDAY, JANUARY 26, 2026

Minn. police barred from shooting evidence

A delicate balancing act evolves on tense streets of Maine cities

By Brian MacQuarrie, Giulia McDonnell Nieto del Rio, and Sean Cotter
GLOBE STAFF

LEWISTON, Maine — Maine leaders are speaking out more sharply against the federal immigration sweep in their state, including angry criticism of its targets and tactics delivered during a large Saturday rally held hours after another US citizen had been shot and killed by ICE agents in Minneapolis.

What had been a careful, rhetorical balancing act — criticizing the ICE operation while emphasizing the importance of nonviolent protest — has begun turning to increasing anger after the shooting of Alex Pretti, a 37-year-old Veterans Affairs nurse, in Minneapolis.

“We need ICE out of Minnesota. We need ICE out of Maine. We need them out now!” Maine Secretary of State Shenna Bellows said to an estimated 1,000 protesters gathered inside and outside an overflowing Lewiston event center.

“Right now, it isn’t safe for Black and brown people to be on the streets in Maine,” Bellows said. “And that is unconscionable.”

Governor Janet Mills, in a statement Saturday, also blasted ICE and demanded a meeting
PORTLAND, Page A7

JAIDA GREY EAGLE/BLOOMBERG NEWS

Residents crowded near the scene of Alex Pretti's death.

Dedicated to veterans

Colleagues said Alex Pretti, an ICU nurse, cared intently for human rights. A6.

A hesitancy in the pews

Portland pastor says his flock is afraid to attend Mass. B1.

Officials try unconventional moves in bid to sidestep Homeland Security

By Ernesto Londoño
NEW YORK TIMES

MINNEAPOLIS — For the second time in three weeks, local and state authorities in Minnesota say they have been impeded from investigating how federal agents shot and killed someone, cutting off access to crucial evidence and basic facts.

In both cases, Minnesota officials said they sought to have their Bureau of Criminal Apprehension, or BCA, which typically takes the lead in police shootings, work in partnership with the federal government.

Yet the Department of Homeland Security has blocked local investigators from reviewing evidence gathered following the fatal shootings of Renee Good and Alex Jeffrey Pretti, both Minneapolis residents and US citizens.

Federal authorities shut down an early effort to collaboratively investigate the agent who killed Good and said that they would handle any investigation into the killing of Pretti.

“We’re in uncharted territory here,” said Drew Evans, the superintendent of the BCA.

On Saturday, in the chaotic hours after federal agents killed Pretti, state officials resorted to a pair of highly unconventional moves in a bid to gain access to the scene and evidence.

MINNEAPOLIS, Page A6

BARRY CHIN/GLOBE STAFF

New England Patriots cornerback Christian Gonzalez hauled in a crucial interception as the winds and snowflakes whirled.

A bone-chillin’, slip-smackin’, glorious return to Super Bowl

Pats’ remarkable turnaround season awaits its final chapter in Santa Clara

DENVER — It was just about supertime back in snowy New England when Patriot sophomore quarterback Drake Maye effectively ended the AFC Championship game in snowy Denver. With less than two minutes to play, on third and 5 from his own 41, Maye took the snap from under center, faked a handoff to his right, then peeled left for a bootleg race to the first-down marker on the left sideline.

DAN SHAUGHNESSY

Without slipping or fumbling in the impossible conditions, Maye beat Broncos linebacker Jonah Elliss to the sticks, clinching New England’s 10-7 victory and sending the Patriots to their 12th Super Bowl.

And so this wondrous, improbable season is not yet over. The 2025-26 Pats have come all the way back from consecutive 4-13 seasons and will play the Seattle Seahawks in Super Bowl LX in Santa Clara, Calif., on Feb. 8.

“You have to believe things, sometimes before you can see them,” said New England’s football-lovin’, player-huggin’, first-year coach Mike Vrabel. “We have a great group of guys . . . We did enough to win the

SHAUGHNESSY, Page C7

Residents drop insurance as premiums soar

Lawmakers detail health care angst of constituents

By Julian E.J. Sorapuru and Jim Puzzanghera

GLOBE STAFF

and Shae Lake

GLOBE CORRESPONDENT

WASHINGTON — For months, Democrats warned that the expiration of enhanced Affordable Care Act tax credits would have dire implications. They predicted skyrocketing health insurance premiums that would leave many Americans in precarious financial situations and some would be forced to consider going without coverage amid a broader affordability crisis.

That prediction has come to pass for millions of people across the county reliant on the program also known as Obamacare. New England is no exception.

10,000+

Massachusetts residents dropped their insurance plans last month during open enrollment according to the state health care marketplace, nearly double the amount who did the same last year.

The Globe interviewed 12 members of Congress representing Massachusetts, New Hampshire, Rhode Island, Vermont and Maine. Each lawmaker, all Democrats, described an outpouring of calls and emails from disgruntled constituents suddenly unable to afford their health insurance after the expiration of ACA subsidies on Dec. 31, leaving them uncertain about their future well-being. Constituents, they said, have also been forced to avoid routine medical attention, take on new work, and reorganize already-tight personal budgets in order to stay insured.

Alyssa Black is among them. As the chair of the Vermont House of Representatives Health Care Committee and a health care administrator by trade, Black is deeply familiar with the importance of affordable insurance. Even so, she contemplated cancelling her Obamacare plan after learning her

PREMIUMS, Page A10

In the news

Dr. William Foege has died at 89. The public health care leader was credited with being the point person on the eradication of smallpox in the world. B6.

Canadian Prime Minister Mark Carney, responding to another threat from President Trump, said his country has no intention of pursuing a free trade deal with China. A3.

Lindsay Clancy sued her psychiatrist and others in a medical malpractice complaint that gives her account of a male voice that she says ordered her to kill her children in Duxbury. B1.

For breaking news, updated stories, and more, visit our website:

BostonGlobe.com

Hunkering down, then digging out

Storm sweeps region, leading to treacherous travel, widespread closures

By Sarah Rahal
GLOBE STAFF
and Lila Hempel-Edgers and Lauren Albano
GLOBE CORRESPONDENTS

The biggest storm Massachusetts has seen in four years arrived in force Sunday, unleashing heavy snow resulting in dangerous travel conditions that rippled across every corner of the state.

Delivering what forecasters called “double-digit jackpot snowfall” of 12 to nearly 22 inches across much of the region, the blockbuster winter storm swept in from west to east throughout the day. Most communities saw light, fluffy snow, but parts of Southeastern Massachusetts and Rhode Island experienced heavier, wetter bursts — and a brief wintry mix.

At least one storm-related death was reported when a plow truck backed into a married
SNOWSTORM, Page A5

FINN GOMEZ FOR THE BOSTON GLOBE

Ryan Guyon, 28, of Vermont, rested his head after being covered in snow in Boston Common Sunday.

One super snow

Monday: Bands of heavy snow. High 22-27, low 8-13.

Tuesday: Cloudy and cold. High 21-26, low 4-9.

High tide: 4:16, 4:49.

Sunrise: 7:04. Sunset: 4:40.

Weather and comics, D4-5. Obituaries, B6.

VOL. 309, NO. 26

*

Suggested retail price
$4.00

0 947725 4