Widespread travel chaos in US amid massive winter storm

MORE THAN 15,400 FLIGHTS CANCELLED, HIGHEST SINCE THE PANDEMIC

LAS VEGAS

A strengthening winter storm set the stage for a brutal travel day yesterday, with airlines warning of widespread cancellations and delays at some of the nation's busiest airports.

Widespread snow, sleet and freezing rain threatened nearly 180 million people — more than half the US population — in a path stretching from the southern Rocky Mountains to New England.

After sweeping through the South, forecasters said the

EMIRATES, ETIHAD CANCEL FLIGHTS

Etihad Airways and Emirates cancelled several flights to and from the United States because Storm Fern brought heavy snow, ice and frigid conditions that disrupted US air travel. Emirates suspended key routes between Dubai and cities including Dallas, New York, Washington, Boston, Milan and Athens for flights on January 24–26, and won't accept connecting passengers at origin for those services. Etihad grounded flights between Abu Dhabi and New York's JFK and Washington Dulles. Affected passengers are being rebooked or offered refunds.

storm was set to move into the Northeast, dumping about 1 to 2 feet (30 to 60 centimetres) of snow from Washington through New York and Boston. More than 15,400 flights have been cancelled across the US since Saturday, according to flight-tracking site FlightAware. Over 10,200 of those were scheduled for yesterday. Aviation analytics firm Cirium said that as of yesterday morning, the storm is the highest experienced cancellation event since the pandemic.

Ronald Reagan Washington National Airport said on its website that all airlines had cancelled departing flights for the day.

Significant disruptions have hit major airport hubs in Dallas-Fort Worth, Charlotte, Philadelphia and Atlanta as well as New York's John F. Kennedy International Airport and LaGuardia Airport. Meanwhile, over 600,000 customers in the US were without power early yesterday.
