NEW BOMBSHELL FOR SUSSEXES

HARRY AND MEGHAN TOO TOXIC BLASTS CHARITY BOSS

She accuses Duke of bullying – and says couple's brand harmed Sentebale's work

THE head of Prince Harry's African charity has issued a devastating broadside against the Duke and Duchess of Sussex, describing the couple's brand as 'toxic'.

In one sensational interview, Dr Sophie Chandaoka, chair of Sentebale – the organisation the Duke of Sussex co-founded to help children with HIV – accused the Prince of being responsible for 'harassment and bullying at scale'.

And in another, she claimed Harry's team asked her to defend Meghan against negative publicity, but she refused. 'I said no, we're not setting a precedent by which we become an extension of the Sussex PR machine,' she said.

Her claims of bullying come in a conversation with Sky News's Trevor Phillips – airing this morning – in which she accuses the Prince of 'unleashing the Sussex machine on me' when he authorised the release of a statement revealing he had
