The 32-year-old son of filmmaker Rob Reiner and photographer Michele Singer Reiner was arrested on suspicion of murder in his parents' deaths, the Los Angeles Police Department said Monday — a harrowing development in killings that have astonished Hollywood.

The couple's bodies were discovered at their Brentwood home after 3:30 p.m. on Sunday, according to a spokesperson for the Los Angeles Fire Department, which responded to a request for medical aid. Nick Reiner was taken into custody at 9:15 that night and booked at 5:04 a.m. Monday. He is being held in a Los Angeles County jail with no bail.

"As a result of the initial investigation, it was determined that the Reiners were the victims of homicide. The investigation further revealed that Nick Reiner ... was responsible for their deaths," the LAPD said in a news release. The case is being handled by the department's Robbery-Homicide Division. On Tuesday, it will be sent to the Los Angeles County District Attorney's Office for filing consideration.

ROB REINER | 1947-2025

A child of Hollywood became one of its enduring guardians

BY ETHAN BECK AND JADA YUAN

Rob Reiner, who followed his father into show business, rose to prominence as an actor and ranged across Hollywood genres as the director of crowd-pleasing films including "The Princess Bride" and "When Harry Met Sally..." was found dead Dec. 14 along with his wife, photographer Michele Singer Reiner. He was 78.

Their family confirmed the deaths in a statement, after the couple were found at their Los Angeles home in an apparent homicide. A Los Angeles Police Department spokesperson said Monday that the Reiners' son Nick, 32, was arrested on murder charges.

The eldest son of comic writer and performer Carl Reiner, Mr. Reiner became a mainstay of 1970s television as a star of the CBS sitcom "All in the Family." He won two Emmy Awards as Mike "Meathead" Stivic, the counter-cultural son-in-law to conservative patriarch Archie Bunker, and

Plan would reshape military

BIG POWER SHIFTS AT HIGHEST RANKS

Proposal to cut number of commands, generals

BY DAN LAMOTHE, TARA COPP, NOAH ROBERTSON AND ALEX HORTON

Senior Pentagon officials are preparing a plan to downgrade several of the U.S. military's major headquarters and shift the balance of power among its top generals, in a major consolidation sought by Defense Secretary Pete Hegseth, people familiar with the matter said.

If adopted, the plan would usher in some of the most significant changes at the military's highest ranks in decades, in part following through on Hegseth's promise to break the status quo and slash the number of four-star generals in the military. It would reduce in prominence the headquarters of U.S. Central Command, U.S. European Command and U.S. Africa Command by placing them under the control of a new organization known as U.S. International Command, according to five people familiar with the matter.

Joint Chiefs Chairman Dan Caine is expected to detail the proposal, which has not previously been reported, for Hegseth in the coming days. Such moves would complement other efforts

MAGA figures warn Trump the base is checking out

He's advised to reconnect with restless supporters as midterms loom

BY NATALIE ALLISON, KADIA GOBA AND HANNAH KNOWLES

As Donald Trump ate his crab cake lunch inside the White House last month, conservative pollster Mark Mitchell tried to explain that there was a disconnect between what the administration seemed to be focused on and what Trump's passionate base of supporters wanted to see.

"Sir, you got shot at the Butler rally," Mitchell said, invoking the "really strong optics" of Trump raising his fist in defiance after the assassination attempt in Pennsylvania in July 2024.

"You said, 'Fight, fight, fight.' But nobody ever clarified what that means," Mitchell continued. "And right now, you're fight-fight-fighting Marjorie Taylor Greene and not actually fight-fight-fighting for Americans."

The head pollster at Rasmussen Reports warned Trump that many of his supporters believed that he hadn't "drained the swamp" in Washington and suggested that the president refocus with a plan to embrace "pragmatic economic

Hyatt heir Pritzker testing Democrats' appetite for billionaires

BY MAEVE RESTON

SPRINGFIELD, ILL. — On a late summer afternoon at the Illinois State Fairgrounds, hundreds of Democrats sipped cold beer from clear plastic "JB" party cups as they waited under a large tent to hear their governor's fiery populist attacks on President Donald Trump's agenda.

down, Jay Robert "JB" Pritzker, 60, thundered from the stage about Medicaid, Medicare, voting rights, civil rights and food assistance, accusing Trump and his party of demolishing the social safety net.

"MAGA Republicans are trying to take away everything that matters to working families," said Pritzker, who is seeking a third term next year. "Are you ready for the fight?"

Left unsaid by Pritzker that day in August: He is the wealthiest officeholder in the United States, other than Trump, as a scion of the Hyatt Hotels family with a personal fortune worth $3.9 billion, according to Forbes. For years, Pritzker has bankrolled an array of liberal causes and his own political career at a nearly unrivaled clip, pouring more than $508 million into state and federal elections since 2015, including at least $348 million for his campaigns.

Islamic State resurfaces in link to Sydney attack

Experts say it continues to inspire violence more than other terror groups

BY GREG MILLER, SOUAD MEKHENNET AND AARON SCHAFER

As authorities began surveying the carnage and searching for clues after Sunday's mass killing in Australia, they looked for a marker that has surfaced repeatedly in recent years at scenes of horrific violence.

The black flag of the Islamic State, also known as ISIS, is no longer associated with the sprawling territorial "caliphate" the group once controlled in the Syrian desert. It no longer serves as a banner beckoning Islamist militant recruits from across the globe or as the symbol of an organization with tight operational control over its terrorist plots and media profile.

But the discovery of Islamic State flags at the scene of the shooting attack on a Hanukkah celebration in Sydney, according to senior officials speaking to the Australian Broadcast Corp. and video footage from the scene, served as a reminder that the group continues to inspire violence on a global scale with more frequency and tenacity than other terrorist organizations, according to security officials and terrorism experts.

The Islamic State has gone "from being a governing authority that shocked the world" to an
