UAE ranks
first globally for trust in government

DUBAI
BY KHITAM AL AMIR
Chief News Editor

His Highness Sheikh Mohammed Bin Rashid Al Maktoum, Vice-President and Prime Minister of the UAE and Ruler of Dubai, has announced that the UAE has been ranked first globally in the Edelman Trust Index 2026, published by the New York-based Edelman firm.

The ranking places UAE at the top of the global list for public trust in government.

Marking the milestone, Sheikh Mohammed said trust is not built overnight, but earned over many years through credibility, keeping promises, the legitimacy of achievement, the integrity of laws and respect for people.

“Trust, once established, becomes a form of national capital that strengthens social cohesion and enables faster progress,” he wrote on his X account. “It is built over long years through honest words, fulfilled commitments, fair laws and respect for human dignity.”

President His Highness Sheikh Mohamed Bin Zayed Al Nahyan met Indian Prime Minister Narendra Modi in New Delhi for high-level talks and the exchange of agreements aimed at deepening strategic cooperation across a wide range of sectors. The discussions took place during Sheikh Mohamed’s working visit to India, within the framework of the two countries’ longstanding relationship reflected in their Comprehensive Strategic Partnership and Comprehensive Economic Partnership.

Talks covered the economy, investment, defence, space, advanced technology, artificial intelligence, renewable energy, and food security. They reaffirmed the importance of sustained dialogue and regular exchanges, highlighting their commitment to broadening cooperation across government institutions and strategic industries.
