Russian air attacks kill 22 in Ukraine

Unblocked barrages of drones, missiles expose defense gaps

KYIV, Ukraine — Russia unleashed waves of missiles and drones at Ukraine early Monday, killing at least 22 people in attacks that exposed widening gaps in the country’s air defenses more than four years into Moscow’s full-scale invasion, authorities said. All of the ballistic missiles launched by Russia struck their targets, underscoring Kyiv’s need for more U.S.-made Patriot interceptor missiles — a point Ukrainian President Volodymyr Zelenskyy will likely reiterate at a NATO summit in Ankara, Turkey, this week.

Fifteen people were killed in the capital of Kyiv, which was Russia’s main target, and 56 were injured, according to administrative head Tymur Tkachenko. Another seven people were killed in the wider Kyiv region and 29 were injured, according to Ukraine’s emergency service.

Emergency workers searched for survivors in the rubble of residential high-rises in two locations that suffered direct hits.

Moscow has stepped up attacks on Kyiv in retaliation for Ukraine’s recent long-range strikes, according to the Russian Defense Ministry. Those Ukrainian attacks have caused severe fuel shortages and put pressure on President Vladimir Putin.

On Thursday, a Russian strike killed 31 people in Kyiv, the deadliest attack in the capital this year.

Ukraine’s advances in drone technology have given it an edge in recent months, analysts and Western officials say, striking supply routes behind the front line, stripping the Russian army of momentum on the battlefield and slowing its advance.

But Russia now is exploiting vulnerabilities in Ukraine’s air defenses, which remain heavily reliant on the Patriot missile systems to intercept ballistic missiles it can rarely shoot down. The war in the Middle East has strained the global supply of Patriot interceptors — a shortage now felt keenly in Ukraine.

Ukraine’s air force said Russia fired 351 drones and 68 missiles overnight, targeting mainly Kyiv, and all 29 ballistic missiles struck their targets.

“To intercept ballistics, we need the means for interception,” air force spokesman Yuriy Ihnat said on national television. “Russians are certainly using the fact that there is a serious deficit of interceptor missiles now, in Ukraine and the world.”

Bill seeks transparency on sales of group homes

Measure to add oversight on private equity firms awaits Pritzker’s signing

By Olivia Olander
CHICAGO TRIBUNE

By the time Illinois notified group home provider Broadstep two years ago that it was revoking its license, the list of problems documented by state investigators spanned nearly seven pages.

Expired medications. Incomplete background checks. “Critical incidents,” which may have included medical emergencies and other events that spurred 911 calls, not reported properly. And some employees without proof of high school diplomas, GEDs or required literacy tests.

The list went on. Broadstep was one of the larger group home providers in Illinois for people with intellectual and developmental disabilities, according to a 2024 state audit, though a small number of providers had many more sites. And its collapse became a flashpoint in a broader debate over its onetime owner — a private equity firm — and the growing role such owners have in an industry the audit said in 2023 served more than 3,100 licensed sites and about 11,000 people with developmental disabilities statewide.

Earlier this year, that debate produced legislation now on Gov. JB Pritzker’s desk requiring greater transparency from investment firms that buy group homes for people with disabilities.

THE LEGISLATION

The bill, which passed the General Assembly this spring with broad bipartisan support, requires facilities for people with intellectual and developmental disabilities to report to the state when they are purchased by an asset management company — such as a private equity fund, hedge fund or venture capital firm.

After a community integrated living arrangement — commonly known as a group home or CILA

Police: Occupants of capsized boat from Batavia, Wheaton

LAKE GENEVA, Wis. — Joseph Roberts was spending a day with his family on the Lake Geneva beach Friday afternoon when he looked up and saw a black sky.

Roberts, 45, went to get a tarp for his truck, but quickly realized the storm would outpace him. Within minutes, he said, “pandemonium” had arrived.

“These winds were vicious,” Roberts said. “Six foot white-caps, throwing boats — at least two flipped over.”

Roberts and his family sheltered in his truck, he said. As they emerged, trying to get their bearings, they started to hear sirens. Roberts’ mother ventured down toward where emergency workers were swarming the beach and came back with a terrible observation: “This couple was down there, hysterical,” he said. “They had lost children, there were three missing.”

The three children, whose identities were not released as of Monday afternoon, were aboard a boat that capsized in the storm, authorities said. Their deaths and the vast damage from the storm cast a pall over the Fourth of July weekend in the Wisconsin vacation spot, long a destination for Chicagoans in search of summer escapes from the city.

Authorities on Monday said the people aboard the boat that capsized Friday were from suburban Batavia and Wheaton, as well as the town of Fontana, Wisconsin.

Roberts has been haunted by the deaths over the last few days.

“Being a parent, I keep feeling the sense of, I couldn’t imagine losing a child,” he said. “I can’t imagine what they’re going through in their hearts and minds.”

EXTENSIVE BOATING EXPERIENCE

Officials with the Wisconsin Department of Natural Resources and the Geneva Lake Law Enforcement Agency said 10 people were on board the the privately owned 25-foot 2024 Nautique P25 vessel when the “sudden and severe” storm system swept across Walworth County and the surrounding area Friday.

Occupants of the boat ranged in ages from 6 to 75, and investigation records show that all the children on board the vessel were wearing

As Snelling prepares to exit CPD, holiday incidents are down

By Sam Charles
CHICAGO TRIBUNE

Each summer, holiday weekends pose a challenge to public safety in Chicago. The Memorial Day, Fourth of July and Labor Day weekends are, historically, three of the most violent that the city sees in a given year.

Violence during marquee summer weekends has been tempered as of late, including last weekend, when between Friday afternoon and early Monday the city saw four homicides, according to police.

Violence has fallen sharply overall in Chicago in recent years after a spike during the COVID-19 pandemic, though the city’s illustrious criminal history still serves as a political punching bag when convenient. Still, Chicago will soon face such holidays without its top police boss, as Superintendent Larry Snelling’s tenure draws to a close.

Large holiday gatherings have occasionally turned tragic quickly, especially in recent years as the city has seen a proliferation of “switches,” which can turn a semi-automatic handgun into a machine gun. That has meant more shootings with multiple victims in
