NOW UNIONS REJECT ED'S GREEN LUNACY

Unite warns Labour's Net Zero plan will become 'millstone' as No.10 refuses to guarantee Miliband will keep his job

LABOUR'S biggest union backer attacked the Net Zero drive last night, warning that it is set to become a 'political millstone' around the party's neck.

Amid growing unrest over the green agenda, Unite took aim at the Government's 'laughable' inaction to protect jobs.

And Sir Keir Starmer failed to guarantee Ed Miliband would stay in post as splits within Labour became apparent.

The row over Net Zero was re-ignited by former prime minister Tony Blair who this week delivered a scathing verdict on Mr Miliband's programme.

Sir Tony said any strategy based on phasing out fossil fuels in the short term or limiting consumption was 'doomed to fail'.

He said the public would be resentful at 'being asked to make financial sacrifices and changes in lifestyle when they know that their impact on global emissions is minimal'. His intervention
