Israel touts US ‘support’ on Iran

Trump’s meetings with Netanyahu, Zelenskyy underscore president’s role in foreign conflicts

WASHINGTON — Israeli Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu and President Donald Trump met at the White House on Tuesday for the first time since they launched a joint war against Iran, offering a chance for Netanyahu to smooth out strains in their relationship. The closed-door meeting lasted nearly 90 minutes and was “positive and productive,” according to White House press secretary Karoline Leavitt. The White House did not immediately offer more details. Despite signs of tension between the two ahead of the sitdown, Netanyahu was effusive afterward and called it “excellent” in a post on his Instagram profile. “When I say excellent, I don’t mean it in a superficial way,”

Netanyahu said in Hebrew. “A conversation with full partnership, with mutual support, with an understanding of the common goal of ensuring that Iran does not have nuclear weapons, and other goals as well. One of the best conversations I’ve had with the President of the United States, our friend Donald Trump.” Earlier Tuesday, Trump and Ukrainian President Volodymyr Zelenskyy met ahead of Sen. Lindsey Graham’s funeral, with the two leaders discussing ways for Ukraine to produce its own powerful weapons and “other ideas that could help” in its ongoing war against Russia. The sit-down in the Oval Office was closed to the media.

‘Ring of fire’ contributing to region’s wild, severe summer

Two tornadoes confirmed. One in Glen Ellyn and one in Lansing. Two-inch hail in Oak Brook. A 63 mph wind gust in Lakeview. A month’s worth of rain — 3 inches — at Midway Airport. Is the severity of Monday’s storms the new normal for the Chicago area? Extreme weather is nothing new to the region, but the number and intensity of storms this year has been unusual, experts say. Illinois had already set a record for tornadoes in a year, with 220 confirmed through Monday — more than twice as much as any other state. The state has also suffered nine “significant” weather events this year, the National Weather Service reported, the most in the past decade. And extreme conditions played a role in the sudden storm downburst, with winds estimated at more than 80 mph, that led to Jasmine Murillo was away from her home at a doctor’s appointment when severe storms swept through her Lansing home of 10 years on Monday. Winds tore the roof off her home. The walls collapsed. The place where all five of Anaya’s children took their first steps was gone in an instant. “You never think it’s going to happen to you,” Murillo said. “You leave the house one day, and you have your whole day planned out, ‘I’m going to come home, I’m going to cook’.... But then you come home, and you don’t have a home.” On Tuesday, National Weather Service workers confirmed that an EF-1 tornado hit Lansing as severe thunderstorms ripped across Chicagoland and northwest Indiana on Monday, pelting the region with up to 4 inches of rain and tennis ball-sized hail. The weather survey crews also confirmed an EF-0 tornado swept through Glen Ellyn. “I just can’t believe this happened to us,” Murillo said. “I don’t think any tired mother deserves this. No one deserves this.”

Pritzker signs cellphone ban for public, charter schools

By Olivia Olander
CHICAGO TRIBUNE

Illinois public and charter school students will be barred from using cellphones during the school day starting in fall 2027, under a law Gov. JB Pritzker signed Tuesday. The new law requires districts without an existing phone policy to adopt a “bell-to-bell” ban for elementary and middle school students. High school students may use phones during breaks at the discretion of individual districts. “Illinois is taking a major step forward in creating classrooms, libraries and learning environments free from distractions by banning the use of cellphones during the school day,” Pritzker said at the bill signing at northwest suburban Elgin High School. “We want to make sure that every hour of school time can have the greatest possible positive impact.” For elementary school and middle school students, the ban
