JAMES BARTHOLOMEW, whose brother, John, a Chicago police officer, was killed in a shooting last month

‘A COP’S COP’

By Caroline Kubzansky, Sam Charles and Madeline Buckley | CHICAGO TRIBUNE

Chicago police Superintendent Larry Snelling called fallen Chicago police Officer John Bartholomew a “cop’s cop,” remembering a photograph of the patrol officer wearing a helmet while working hard during the Democratic National Convention in Chicago in 2024.

“He walked like a seasoned veteran. He was proud, strong. He loved his job,” Snelling said during Friday’s funeral for the slain officer. “Most important, he was a family man who always helped his family, because he truly loved his family.”

Hundreds of mourners gathered Friday morning at an Edgewater church as loved ones remembered Bartholomew, whose killing raised questions about how a suspect in custody had a gun and drew scrutiny to the county’s electronic monitoring system. Bartholomew, 38, was slain in a shooting inside Endeavor Health Swedish Hospital on April 25 that also seriously injured a second officer, Nelson Crespo.

Prosecutors have alleged that Alphanso Talley, 26, shot the officers while being treated at the hospital following an arrest for alleged armed robbery.

Family members and colleagues recalled the officer as a public-service-driven family man with a sharp wit and optimistic demeanor, who cheerfully told a supervisor, “Hey commander,” every time he passed by her. He loved his family and hated social media, his brother remarked to laughs from the crowd, noting the irony of his image circulating across the internet over the past two weeks.

“He had that skill, that skill to be able to talk to people,” Cmdr. Alison Christian said. “It was just amazing. He would go into jobs and he would worry about everybody’s feelings. He would worry about the victim, the offender, the police officer. At the end of a job he was on, he made sure that everybody felt good.”

Public risk still low for hantavirus, experts say

By Allison Kiehl
CHICAGO TRIBUNE

Amid the high-profile hantavirus outbreak on a cruise ship in the Atlantic Ocean, experts say there is no reason for Illinoisans to be afraid. There’s no immediate risk of the disease spreading to Chicagoland, they say, unless an infected individual were to come to the region.

Hantaviruses are a group of viruses primarily found in species of rodents across the world. The virus can be transmitted to humans through urine or fecal matter and cause fatal lung and

US, Iran trade strikes in Strait of Hormuz

DUBAI, United Arab Emirates — U.S. forces fired on and disabled two Iranian oil tankers Friday after exchanging fire with Iranian forces in the Strait of Hormuz overnight. The United Arab Emirates, meanwhile, reported another Iranian missile and drone attack.

The attacks cast more doubt on a tenuous month-old ceasefire that the United States has insisted is still in effect. Washington is awaiting an Iranian response to its latest proposal for a deal to end the war, reopen the strait and roll back Tehran’s disputed nuclear program.

U.S. Secretary of State Marco Rubio said he hopes to receive “a serious offer” from Iran later Friday.

The U.S. military said Friday that its forces had disabled two Iranian tankers that were trying to breach an American blockade of Iran’s ports. Hours earlier, the military said it thwarted attacks on three Navy ships and struck Iranian military facilities in the strait.

Iran has mostly blocked the critical waterway for global energy since the U.S. and Israel launched the war on Feb. 28, causing a global spike in fuel prices and rattling world markets. The U.S. has imposed its own blockade
