

A COUPLE relax on the sand in the shade of palm trees in Long Beach to get a respite from the heat wave.

Southland remains set on ‘broil’

Heat advisories set to expire Saturday are extended through Sunday as more temperature records are likely to be broken

By Grace Toohey

The oppressive heat wave broiling California and much of the West will continue to bring dangerously hot temperatures — and probably more record-breakers — for even longer than forecasters first predicted.

The heat advisories in effect across Southern California, including the extreme heat warning, are being extended through Sunday, said National Weather Service meteorologist Ryan Kittell. Most were set to expire Saturday.

Friday was still expected to bring peak temperatures, similar to conditions seen Thursday, “but the downward trend is very slow over the weekend,” Kittell said. “It’s still going to be very warm — well above normal — though the weekend. The evenings are going to be very warm as well.”

Many areas Thursday night into early Friday experienced little cooling, with temperatures across the L.A. Basin remaining near or above 70 degrees. Experts warn that lack of nighttime relief can be the most dangerous situation, as it doesn’t give the body a chance to recover from daytime highs — and can help fuel a wildfire, if one ignites.

“Extreme heat is dangerous even at night when temperatures don’t cool down,” the weather service’s Weather Prediction Center wrote in a heat wave update. “Without A/C or cooling, the body can’t recover, increasing the risk of heat illness.”

The city of Los Angeles has opened up additional

2nd Menendez brother faces parole board

Lyle’s hearing comes a day after Erik was denied freedom in their parents’ slaying.

By James Queally, Salvador Hernandez and Richard Winton

SACRAMENTO — Lyle Menendez faced questions regarding his credibility, repeated violation of prison rules and alleged incidents of “manipulation” of other inmates during a lengthy hearing before the California Board of Parole on Friday.

The inquiry came a day after his younger brother, Erik Menendez, 54, was denied parole. The back-to-back hearings marked the first time the brothers have faced a parole board since being convicted of killing their parents in 1989.

During Friday’s hearing, Lyle Menendez was questioned about prison rule violations, his effort to get witnesses to lie during his murder trial, and other issues that board members referred to as a “web of lies” as they assessed whether or not to release the 57-year-old.

But after more than nine hours of questions, as well as testimony by relatives who supported Lyle’s release, the board had not reached a decision by Friday evening.

The parole board grilled Menendez over his efforts to get witnesses to lie during his trials, the lavish shopping sprees he and his brother Erik took after their parents’ killings, and whether he felt relief after the murders.

“I felt this shameful period of those six months of

Famine is formally declared in Gaza

By Wafaa Shurafa and Sam Mednick

GAZA CITY — After almost two years of war, the Gaza Strip is now in the grips of a famine — the first widespread hunger declared in the Middle East — according to the world’s leading authority on food crises.

The Integrated Food Security Phase Classification, or IPC, said Friday that famine is happening in Gaza City — the Gaza Strip’s large-est city, home to hundreds of thousands of Palestinians. It’s likely to spread south to Deir al Balah and Khan Yunis by the end of next month and across the territory without a ceasefire and an end to restrictions on humanitarian aid, the United Nations-backed monitor said.

Formal famine determinations are rare. The IPC has previously determined famines in Somalia in 2011, South Sudan in 2017 and

MORE THAN half a million people in the Gaza Strip face catastrophic levels of hunger, a report said.

Oklahoma to vet teachers on ‘leftism’

It’s not easy being from California, especially if you’re hoping to leave the Golden State’s fires and rising home costs behind and move to a more affordable red state.

In Texas, some politicians have adopted “Don’t California my Texas” as both a rallying cry and a fundraising appeal.

In Montana, rising home prices prompted lawmakers to pass a package of bills this year that increased property taxes on people — including many Californians — who own second homes in the state.

And now, in Oklahoma, education officials have entered the fray by requiring teachers from California and New York to take an exam aimed at guarding against “radical leftist ideology.”

The test is being developed by leader-

Applicants from California and New York will have to take an exam to guard against purported ‘radical’ ideology ship from the Oklahoma State Department of Education and PragerU, a non-profit advocacy group that produces videos promoting conservative views of history, finance and other topics. PragerU videos have already been approved for use in schools in several states, including Oklahoma.

By Hannah Fry

“Our teacher qualification test is very simple,” PragerU Chief Executive Marissa Streit said in a statement to The Times. “Frankly, every American should be able to pass it. Certainly, every teacher should be able to pass it.”

She added that the full test will be available in the coming weeks. “We encourage you to take a look at the test yourself and make your own decision on whether it’s reasonable or not,” she said.

Ryan Walters, Oklahoma’s state super-

A FLOCK of Wilson’s phalarope flies over Mono Lake in Lee Vining, Calif.

This long-journeying bird connects two lakes — and communities

Wilson’s phalarope is a star in Argentina, California

By Ian James | REPORTING FROM LEE VINING, CALIF.

Thousands of birds fill the air over Mono Lake, banking and swooping in a swirling murmuration that resembles an aerial school of fish. As they sweep past, their beating wings whoosh in unison.

This small species, the Wilson’s phalarope, arrives from the north in large numbers each summer to feed at the saline lake, preparing for a long journey to South America.

After spending July gorging on the larvae of alkali flies, the birds are gradually departing this month to begin their migration to another saline lake about 6,000 miles away — Laguna Mar Chiquita in Argentina.

Partly because of their remarkable transcontinental voyage between salt lakes, the grayish birds have inspired a close partnership between communities in California and Argentina.

Conversations that began among biologists working on bird counts have grown into flourishing bonds among residents, educators and students who see the birds as a graceful symbol of their sister lakes.

Groups of high school students have traveled from the town of Lee Vining, which overlooks Mono Lake, to the giant lake surrounded by farmlands in Argentina. Argentine students have come to California to see the birds and explore their habitat at the

Voices LORRAINE ALI NEWS AND CULTURE CRITIC

When Newsom tweets just like Trump, Fox News hosts go nuts

Fox News has never been bothered by the Trumpian approach to social media, with its all-caps posts and multiple exclamation points. Its self-aggrandizing hyperbole. Its mean-girl name-calling. But this week, the MAGA network’s hosts were triggered.

“You have to stop it with the Twitter thing,” said host Dana Perino. Sean Hannity bemoaned the “performative confrontational style” that only “wins you points with the loony radical base.” Fox News anchor Trace Gallagher referred to the tone as “childish.”

So why the sudden dismay and hurt feelings? Because the taunts and boasts are coming from a Democrat, and not just any lefty, but King Snowflake himself, California Gov. Gavin Newsom.

Adopting Trump’s low-bar social media tactics, the X account of Newsom’s press office has spent recent weeks mimicking the president’s social media style to troll the trolls. They’ve nicknamed U.S. Secretary of Homeland Security Kristi Noem “Commander Cosplay.” And Sen. Ted Cruz (R-Texas) — who took that sunny Mexican vacation

FBI searches Bolton’s home

Agents descend on the home and office of President Trump’s former advisor turned critic. NATION, A7

Trump backs Arizona mine

President criticizes court ruling that temporarily halted a copper project on a sacred Apache site. NATION, A6

Weather

Mostly sunny, warm. L.A. Basin: 92/70. B8

BABY’S PARENTS ARRESTED

Days after 7-month-old Emmanuel Haro disappeared, his parents are arrested on suspicion of murder and their home searched. CALIFORNIA, B1