Labour's Dan Norris suspended by party chiefs after police swoop on his West Country constituency home

STARMER ROCKED AS MP HELD IN RAPE AND CHILD ABUSE PROBE

EXCLUSIVE

SIR Keir Starmer was last night rocked by the arrest of one of his MPs on suspicion of rape and child sex offences.

Dan Norris, a former Labour minister who ousted Jacob Rees-Mogg as the MP for North East Somerset and Hanham at last year's General Election, was taken into custody after police raided his constituency home on Friday.

Officers were later seen removing boxes of Mr Norris's belongings from the property.

Mr Norris, 65, who trained as a child protection officer with the National Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children (NSPCC) and has worked as a teacher, was suspended from the party pending the investigation.

Most of the alleged offences date back nearly 20 years, although the rape claim is understood to be more
