

Chicago Tribune

QUESTIONS? CALL 1-800-TRIBUNE

TUESDAY, MARCH 11, 2025

BREAKING NEWS AT CHICAGOTRIBUNE.COM

Ukraine will offer limited ceasefire

Pause would cover Black Sea region, long-range missile strikes

By Matthew Lee and Hanna Arhirova
Associated Press

JEDDAH, Saudi Arabia — A Ukrainian delegation set to meet with America's top diplomat in Saudi Arabia about ending the 3-year-old war with Russia will propose a ceasefire covering the Black Sea and long-range missile strikes, as well as the release of prisoners, two senior Ukrainian officials said Monday.

The officials, who spoke on condition of anonymity because they were not authorized to speak publicly about Tuesday's meeting, also told The Associated Press that the Ukrainian delegation is ready during the talks to sign an agreement with the United States on access to Ukraine's rare earth minerals — a deal that President Donald Trump is keen to secure.

The officials discussed the confidence-building measures, with no further details, ahead of the Ukrainian negotiating team's meeting with Secretary of State Marco Rubio in Jeddah.

Kyiv is trying to repair the damage done when Ukrainian President Volodymyr Zelenskyy's Feb. 28 visit to Washington descended into an Oval Office argument with Trump and Vice President JD Vance.

At stake is the military aid and intelligence previously offered by the United States that had helped Ukraine in the war but is now paused as Washington pushes for a peace agreement.

Rubio and Zelenskyy landed a few hours apart Monday in Saudi Arabia, although they were not expected to meet. Zelenskyy was to meet with the kingdom's powerful crown prince Monday evening. Rubio also was due to meet Crown Prince Mohammed bin Salman.

Speaking to reporters aboard his plane, Rubio said he and national security adviser Mike Waltz would take stock of Ukraine's responses in Saudi Arabia.

If Ukraine and the U.S. reach an

Turn to Ukraine, Page 9

Sabrina Agee of the Waukegan Housing Authority takes photos of a working smoke detector during an annual inspection at the home of a voucher holder in Waukegan on March 4. AUDREY RICHARDSON/CHICAGO TRIBUNE

Struggle to find housing

Housing authorities are seeking real-time solutions as voucher recipients fail to find housing units with rental subsidies

By Lizzie Kane | Chicago Tribune

Tiara Booker was striking out. She had been looking for months for a place to live using her housing voucher, and she was facing the public housing authority's deadline to lease a unit with the voucher. She and her two children had to couch-surf and sleep in her car as she searched.

She said landlords either requested higher rent payments than the voucher allowed or wouldn't accept her voucher, which she considered discrimination based on her source of income and/or her race.

Booker ended up losing her housing voucher for a couple of hours. But in what she calls a "miracle," a landlord called her back and said she would accept it. The Lake County Housing Authority gave her back the voucher. Booker said she would have been "broken" if she had lost it.

"I could survive, but my kids ... having to look at them and listen to them cry and their concerns and their wishes and their hopes and sit there with nothing to offer them," Booker said. "That would have been a different type of hurt."

Booker is not alone in her struggles to find housing with a voucher.

From the tiny North Chicago Housing Authority to the behemoth Chicago Housing Authority, local housing agencies are seeing their voucher recipients struggle and fail to find housing.

Turn to Housing, Page 2

Victim in fatal shooting called 'very happy,' 'kind'

Death of woman, 21, at nightclub in Stone Park classified as homicide

By Carolyn Stein, Adriana Pérez and Caroline Kubzansky
Chicago Tribune

Axel Calderon loved growing up with his cousin Zulma Daniela Calderon Pacheco, describing her as someone who would always go out of her way for others and one of his favorite people to talk to.

But early Saturday, Calderon received a phone call from his dad: His cousin had been fatally shot at a nightclub in the west suburbs.

"I couldn't even process it at the time," Calderon said. "I just didn't want to believe it and I still don't."

Calderon Pacheco, 21, of Chicago, was killed Saturday at the Mansion Live nightclub in Stone Park after being shot in the face, officials said. Her death was classified as a homicide by the Cook County medical examiner's office.

"It was all just grief," said Calderon, who helped set up a GoFundMe for funeral expenses. "And then we had an altar for her, and praying to her, talking to her in the last moments, it kind of helped."

According to Stone Park police, a fight broke out inside the nightclub about 1:40 a.m. Saturday.

Izabela Encino and Briana

Turn to Death, Page 4

NU, other schools warned by feds

Face threat of cuts to funding if Jewish students not protected

By Nell Salzman
Chicago Tribune

Northwestern University was one of 60 schools that received letters Monday warning them of potential enforcement actions if they do not fulfill their obligations to protect Jewish students on campus.

The letters are the latest in a long line of actions taken by President Donald Trump to crack down on antisemitism. In a press release Monday, the department warned that federal funding or "public investment funded by U.S. taxpayers" to those who "do not fulfill their obligations" could be withdrawn.

"That support is a privilege and it is contingent on scrupulous adherence to federal anti-discrimination laws," newly instated Secretary of Education Linda McMahon said in the press

Turn to Schools, Page 5

Protester punched by officer poised to get settlement

A protester punched by a Chicago police officer at a heated 2020 demonstration is in line to get a $280,000 settlement from the city. Chicagoland, Page 3

Trump panics chipmakers

As President Donald Trump addressed Congress last week, he veered off script to attack a sensitive topic, the CHIPS Act, a bipartisan law aimed at making the U.S. less reliant on Asia for semiconductors. Nation & World

NU dining hall workers go on strike

Hundreds of dining hall workers at Northwestern University walked off the job Monday. Business

TERRENCE ANTONIO JAMES/CHICAGO TRIBUNE

NICE FISHING

People fish for Lake Michigan perch near 85th Street in Chicago as temperatures climbed into the upper 60s on Monday.

TODAY'S WEATHER

High 50 Low 35

Complete Chicagoland forecast on Page 12

$4.00 city and suburbs and elsewhere
177th year No. 70 © Chicago Tribune

