

The Boston Globe

Serving our community since 1872

TUESDAY, APRIL 21, 2026

WOMEN'S ELITE
SHARON LOKEDI
2:18:51

WOMEN'S ELITE WHEELCHAIR
EDEN
RAINBOW-COOPER
1:30:51

MEN'S ELITE
JOHN
KORIR
2:01:51
(COURSE RECORD)

MEN'S ELITE
WHEELCHAIR
MARCEL HUG
1:16:06

130TH BOSTON MARATHON

JESSICA RINALDI/GLOBE STAFF

Men's winner John Korir of Kenya finished in record time. "My message today is, 'Believe in yourself, and you could be a champion in Boston,'" he said.

MILES AND SMILES

The day was idyllic, the course joyful, and the results? Better rewrite that record book.

By Spencer Buell

GLOBE STAFF

Runners dream of days like these. A cool breeze at their backs and some cozy springtime sunshine poking through the clouds set the stage for lasting memories — and history — to be made Monday at the 130th Boston Marathon. Records were smashed, signs waved, cow bells rung, Colonial outfits donned, and firsts of many kinds were celebrated as tens of thousands turned out from Hopkinton to Boston. Mother Nature helped to nudge men's winner John Korir to a new record of 2:01:52, besting the one set in 2011 by more than a minute. After learning what he'd done, Korir, who also won last year, said he was thinking of his supporters back home in Kenya. "I know they're watching," he said in a post-race press conference. "My message today is, 'Believe in yourself, and you could be a champion in Boston. Believe in yourself, trust in God, and you can make it.'" Other competitors put up strong showings, as well. Women's elite runner Sharon Lokedi — who set the course record last year — finished first again, with a time of 2:18:51. Marcel Hug won his fourth straight men's wheelchair title and his ninth in 11 years, and Eden Rainbow-Cooper won the women's wheel-

SUZANNE KREITER/GLOBE STAFF

Suhani Khancelwal joined the wall of cheers at Wellesley College.

MARATHON, Page C6

Title defenders

Sharon Lokedi and John Korir return to the winner's circle with stunning times. C1.

A campus-sized hole

Hampshire College's closure creates a bit of an identity crisis for region, other schools

By Brooke Hauser

GLOBE STAFF

AMHERST — After Hampshire College announced last Tuesday that it would permanently close at the end of December, Patrick MacWilliams, who owns Five College Movers, started getting texts from friends. "I guess you gotta change your name now," one said.

"Four College Movers?" quipped another.

Hampshire's impending closure creates an identity crisis for the region, long known as the Five College Area for its close-knit higher education institutions: the University of Massachusetts Amherst, as well as Hampshire, Smith, Mount Holyoke, and Amherst colleges. To-

COLLEGES, Page A7

JESSICA RINALDI/GLOBE STAFF

"I don't think you could quash that spirit," Sarah Bittenwieser, an alumna of Hampshire College, said of her education.

Demoulas loses bid to come back as Market Basket CEO

By Jon Chesto

GLOBE STAFF

Deposed Market Basket leader Arthur T. Demoulas has lost a court battle to be reinstated as the chain's chief executive, wrapping up one chapter in a high-profile family feud while adding more uncertainty to the future for one of New England's most beloved retailers. On Monday, Delaware Chancery Court Vice Chancellor J. Travis Laster ruled the members of Market Basket's board of directors did not act in bad faith by suspending Demoulas last May and then terminating the popular chief executive in September. Laster generally concurred with the concerns raised by board members that Demoulas was not taking direction properly from the board or sharing financial information. The judge wrote that Demou-

MARKET BASKET, Page A7

For Lynch, a generational fight

Age, style differences underscore primary race

By Anjali Huynh

GLOBE STAFF

It was a made-for-TV split screen of the generational geography in Massachusetts' Eighth District congressional primary. In a single day, 71-year-old Representative Stephen Lynch talked Trump cuts and term limits with seniors at Braintree's Elder Affairs, while later in Boston, his 39-year-old Democratic challenger, Patrick Roath, barreled down the perilous "Cop Slide" on City Hall Plaza alongside a firebrand Gen Z gun violence activist. The age and style differences between the two candidates underscore a key dynamic animating the Democratic Party, even in safe-blue corners such as Massachusetts: Whether a tested old-guard or a youthful but inexperienced vanguard is best to meet the moment, both in terms of the party's own struggles to connect with voters and in confronting the Republican opposition. Lynch is pitching that his 25 years in the House and seniority on committees position him to deliver for his district and re-

EIGHTH DISTRICT, Page A6

Came a long ray

Tuesday: Lots of sun, breezy. High 43-48, low 37-42.
Wednesday: Clouds return. High 47-52, low 40-45.
High tide: 2:27, 3:11.
Sunrise: 5:54. Sunset: 7:32.
Weather and comics, D5-6.
Obituaries, A9.

Both the United States and Iran indicated they planned to take part in another round of peace talks in Pakistan this week. A3.

Eli Lilly's purchase of Kelonia for $3.25 billion is the pharmaceutical giant's latest foray into Massachusetts. D1.

VOL. 309, NO. 111

*

Suggested retail price
$4.00

0 947725 4